Meets with a Sudden Death in Brighton Yesterday.

CHARLES STEWART PARNELL'S CAREER

As the Leader of the Irish Struggle for Liberty.

THE EFFECT OF HIS DEATH ON POLITICS.

The Greatness of the Man's Influence Recognized in the Shadow of His Death. LONDON, October 7 .- Great Britain and Ireland were startled this morning by the utterly unlooked for announcement that Charles suddenly yesterday evening at his home in Brighton. It had been well known that Mr. Parnell has not enjoyed the best of health for years past, and it has been noticed and widely commented upon that since the O'Shea di-vorce developments became a matter of public notoriety, and since political trouble came upon him, that the great Irish member of parliament had grown thinner, and that he had perceptibly aged in appearance. But nobody expected to hear of his death, and no inkling as to his illness had reached the newspapers. Only at this hour-1 o'clock p. m.—has it been possible to obtain the details in regard to the death of Parnell. He died at his home, o'clock yesterday evening. His death is said to have been indirectly due to a chill which he caught last week and which at first was not regarded as being of a serious nature. Mr. Parnell, however, grew worse, and a physician was called in, with the result that the patient was ordered to take to his bed. This was on Friday last, and from that time up Mr. Parnell lost strength, and finally succumbed.

The exact nature of the disease which caused the death of the Irish leader is not made known at present. From the day he took to his bed, however, the state of Mr. Parnell had been such as necessitated the constant attendance of two physicians, but in spite of their incessant and untiring efforts to prolong or save his life, Mr. Parnell gradually sunk lower and lower until he expired in the arms of Mrs. Parnell, who is utterly prostrated by Another Account Another account of Mr. Parnell's fatal sick home at Brighton from Ireland Thursday, and complained of suffering from a chill. On the Friday following he was unable to leave his bed and his regular physician was summoned. He seemed to have considered Mr. Parnell's illness to have been of a serious nature, for he soon sent for another physician, with whom he had a long consultation over the sickness of the Irish leader. This consultation of physicians was resumed Sunday, when Mr. Parnell was found to be in great pain and apparently growing weaker every hour.

His sickness was pronounced to be an attack of acute rheumatism, and every attention and care was paid to the sufferer. He was care fully and untiringly nursed by his wife, who hardly left his bedside from the moment her husband's illness was pronounced to be of serious nature

Mr. Parnell, in spite of the care and attention which he received, did not rally from the Several hours before his death, Mr. Parnel became unconscious, and so remained until he died, in intense agony.

Owing to the suddenness of the Irish lead er's illness, and to the belief of his wife and of the attending physicians that he would' re cover, no friends or relatives of his family, or of that of Mrs. Parnell, were present at Parnell's bedside when he died. Mrs. Parnell and the physicians were alone in attendance upor

Came Like a Thunderbolt.

In this city particularly the news of Parnell's death came down like a thunderbolt upon the clubs and in political circles. No-body, so far as at first known, was even aware that he was indisposed, and consequently when it became known that Parnell was dead the first idea formed was that he had com-

As the day wore on, however, it leaked out from statements of his intimate friends that Mr. Parnell had complained to them recently of not feeling as well as usual, but it was not thought by anybody that there was anything dangerous in his condition.

His Attending Physician. A son of Dr. William Richard Somer author of many important medical works on the disease of the brain and of the spinal cord, including his "Manual of diseases of the nervous system," who has been attending Mr. pervous system, who has been attending Mr. Parnell, was the physician who watched the closing hours of his life. The great leader's condition was so bad throughout Tuesday that Dr. Somers was unable to leave his bedside from early that morning until Parnell breathed his last.

This evening Mrs. Parnell is receiving a large number of telegraphic messages from apparently all parts of the world, all of them containing words of condolence with her in her bereavement.

A dispatch sent from Brighton, at 5:30 o'clock p. m., today, says that Mrs. Parnell continues in a condition too prostrated to be able to see any one. Her oldest daughter is

Both the celebrated Dr. Somers and his son refuse to make any statement as to the cause of his death, or as to the progress of his sickness, on the ground that no member of the Parnel! family has, as yet, accorded them permission to say anything on the subject, and that until they receive such permission the physicians will, under no circumstances, say anything in reference to Parnell's death.

As to the Children.

The news agency states that among his com-

the question of the custody of his wife's younger children.

His physicians, who had gone for the evening, were hastily resummened to his bedside. They found him an hour later in an obviously hopeless condition. From 8 o'clock his wife, Miss O'Shea and the doctors closely watched him and did all possible to prolong his life.

He finally passed away before his wife had realized that he was dead. She had borne up nobly until the last and then when all was over broke down utterly.

Parnell's Last Speech.

Parnell's Last Speech.

The last time Parnell appeared in public was at Creegs, in Ireland, September 27th, when he delivered a long speech upon the attitude with the second living a speech upon the attitude with the second living a speech upon the attitude with the second living a speech upon the attitude with the second living a speech upon the s titude and alleged incon istencies of Dillor and O'Brien. Upon that occasion, Parnell stated that he was speaking in defiance of the orders of the doctors who were attending him, orders of the doctors who were attending him, and who had expressly ordered him to keep to his room. He carried his left arm in a sling and explained to inquirers that he was suffering from rheumatism.

Telegrams from Dublin and other towns in Ireland and the principal towns in England unite in reporting that the death of Parnell has caused the greatest sensation among his supporters, principally on account of the sudden manner in which he died.

In Dublin, Parnell's supporters are in a state of consternation. A meeting of the friends of Parnell was hastily called as soon as news of his death became known, and it was decided that a meeting of all of Parnell's followers should be called for this evening, to consider what steps to take in the face of the disastrous event for their party.

Talk with McCarthy. Talk with McCarthy.

In an interview today, Justin McCarthy said it was impossible to forecast the political effect of the death of Parnell. He hoped it would lead to the complete reunion of all shades of opinion among Irishmen in general and in the Irish parliamentary party in par-progress of autonomy, or, in other words, of the movement for the self-government of Ire-completely disappear in the genuine and uni versal regret which was experienced among Irishmen at the death of Parnell.

Their Last Meeting. "Three weeks ago," Mr. McCarthy said, "we (Parnell and myself) had a long and friendly conference at my house, at Chelsea, and we mutually agreed to draw a part of the Paris fund from bankers in the foreign capital in order to defray the expenses of registering which were incurred before the split in the

"Before the divorce proceedings," said Mc-Carthy, in conclusion, "I was a close friend of Mr. Parnell, whom I admired intensely. He consulted me in regard to the lamentable manifesto, and I used all efforts in endeavor-ing to prevent him from issuing it to the ng to prevent him from issuing it to the anifesto would make his further leadershi of the Irish party an utter impossibility."

Continuing, Mr. McCarthy said that those who followed Parnell's leadership until the last moment had done so purely out of a spirit of personal devotion to the Irish leader, add-

g:
"With the removal of his personality ou "With the removal of his personality our separation as a party ceases. Home rule does not depend any longer upon any one man. Parnell himself carried it to that point. His work, so far as it depended upon himself alone, was done. The cause stands now beyond the reach of danger of any kind."

The above is about the substance of what McCarthy said, but it was evident that he and members of his party were deeply affected at Parnell's death, and that all feeling of animosity to the great Irish leader had sunk beneath the flood of sorrow caused by his sudden and untimely death.

Captain O'Shea Hears the News. Captain O'Shea is living at Brighton, ing to London daily. When he arrived today he called at the office of his solicitor, where he was shown a telegram from Mrs. Parnell, re Brighton. Soon afterward another telegran -this one unsigned-arrived, saying that Parnell had committed suicide.

It appears that Mr. and Mrs. Parnell full intended having the religious marriage cere mony performed, but the vicar of Steining re-fused to officiate, on the ground that Mrs. nused to officiate, on the ground that Mrs. Parnell was a divorced woman. The vicar, however, offered to lend the use of his church for the ceremony, if Parnell found a clergyman to officiate. The bishop of the diocese then forbade the ceremony as the parties were already civilly married. Finally, through Parnell's perseverance, it was arranged that Rev. Mr. Penfold, of St. James, Marylebone, should officiate, and Parnell intended to seek a license when the bishop of Chichester, who was on the continent, returned. It was who was on the continent, returned. It was requested that the marriage should take place at 3 o'clock a. m. and should not be divulged till afterwards.

Mrs. Parnell requested that an emphatic denial be given to the rumors that her hus-band committed suicide. She states that he had long suffered from rheumatism which de-veloped into the fever that killed him.

A Talk with Chamberlain. Hon. Joseph Chamberlain, member of par-liament for West Birmingham, when inter-viewed regarding Parnell's death, said that viewed regarding Famel's cash, said that it might influence the government to go to the country on present legislation, but, he added, it was more likely that the government would endeavor to pass the Irish government bill, with a fair prospect that it could be done if the opposition would adopt the same attitude towards this bill as they had done towards the English local election measure, but it would

DUBLIN, October 7.—Members of parliament and others who remained followers of Parnell, in spite of everything, at a meeting held today appointed Pierce Mahoney and John Redmond a committee to proceed to Brighton tonight, in order to be of all the assistance possible in making arrangements necessary for the funeral of Parnell. necessary for the funeral of Parnell.

The corporation of Dublin has been summoned for a meeting for tomorrow, at which sympathy with Mrs. Parnell will be expressed, and where a call will be issued for a public funeral. The general feeling in leading political clubs in both Great Britain and Ireland is that the death of Parnell will heal the breach which has so long existed in the ranks of the Irish parliamentary party.

There was tremendous excitement is this city when the report of Parnell's death spread among the masses. One of the results was a great rush for the various newspaper offices in endeavors to get a confirmation of the startling information.

in endeavors to get a confirmation of the startling information.

Many a tear-stained face was seen among the crowd as the good qualities of the dead man were referred to and when his efforts in the cause of Irish independence were mentioned. Prominent Parnellites, who have been interviewed upon the subject of Parnell's demise, declare that it will not affect their position, and that they intend to continue in independent connection to the party which has dependent opposition to the party which has cought against their leader.

Many a Tear Was Shed. The offices of the National League were fairly besieged with an excited concourse of warm-hearted Irishmen, who had forgotten all about the divorce troubles of Parnell in their desire to express sympathy with the great leader of the Irish people who had fought so many battles for them in behalf of home rule.

The First Sad Message. The first news of the death of Parnell, which was received in this city, was through Par-nell's brother-in-law, Mr. McDermott, to whom Mrs. Parnell telegraphed the sad news So soon as the information reached the National Club, the blinds were closed and the flag was half-masted and will so remain until Members of the national league, now in this

His Health Had Been Declining Now that Parnell is dead, it is said that it was a matter of notoriety among his friends that his health had been rapidly falling for months past. His friends and the doctors, they say, urged him in vain to be more careful, but all urged him in vain to be more careful, but all their remonstrances were unavailing. Mr. Parnell continued to work at the higher pressure and underwent constant privations and fatiguing journeys which would have rained the health of the strongest men. After the Silgo elections it was privately admitted that Parnell was greatly depressed, and that he felt himself obliged to resort to stimulants in order to sustain his nerves. At Creegs, on September 27th, last, Parnell complained of suffering from a peculiar pain in the region of the heart, which pain, he said, had never troubled him before. This was in addition to the rheumatic trouble in the arm.

All Express Sympathy.

The Mail today, commenting on Parnell's death, says that of the many enemies Par-nell had in Ireland, even the most bitter will nell had in Ireland, even the most bitter willbe shocked at the suddenness of his death.
"For months past," The Mail adds, "he has looked as if he was breaking down under the stress of a battle too severe even for a strong man. Though his cause was hopeless, he was still a thorn in the side of Gladstone, and might still have influenced the elections.
Now the battle for home rule must be fought on its own merits. All the same, every generous heart will lament the tragic end of the Irish Rienzi."

JOHN POPE HENNESSY DEAD.

The Man Who Tested the Parne Strength in Kilkenny. •
London, October 7.—Coupled with the an nouncement this morning that Parnell died last night, was the news that Sir John Pope Hennessy, member of parliament from north Kilkenny, was also dead. Sir John Pope Hennessy, it will be remen pered, immediately after the exposure in the O'Shea divorce case in December, 1890, contested the north Kilkenny election, backed up by Parnell's opponents, and defeated the Par-nellite candidate, Vincent Scully, by 1,147 votes. This was a great, and possibly the greatest, test of the strength between the Parnellites and McCarthyites, and the defeat of Scully, no doubt, counted for a great deal in the future series of disasters which beful the Irish leader.

Sir John Pope Hennessy died at Queenstown rather suddenly. His death is said to have been due to the mental and physical strain to which he was subjected as one of the consequences of the political contest in North Kilkenny.

SEVERAL ADDRESSES OF WELCOME.

Address of the Presiding Bishop-The University Chair—John Wesley's Bible Shown to the Convention, Etc.

WASHINGTON, October 7 .- The second Ecumenical Methodist council met this morning at the Metropolitan Methodist Episcopal church. This edifice has a larger seating ca-pacity than any other Methodist church in the city. There were no temporary decorations to embellish the severe beauty of the gothic interior, and the only change made in the interior arrangements was an addition to the platform back of the pulpit to afford necessary room for distinguished guests. Seated on the platform were Bishop Bow-man, of St. Louis; Bishop Hurst, of Washington; Rev. Dr. Arthur, of England; Dr. A. Corman, of Canada; Rev. Dr. Stephenson, resident of the British Wesleyan conference London; Rev. The body of the church was nearly filled with delegates, nearly five hundred being present, and the galleries and aisles and all available space was filled with spectators.

The Morning Session.

The morning session was opened by Rev.

Bishop Thomas Bowman, of St. Louis, who read the 822d bymn from the "Methodist"

Hymnal," beginning:
Jesus's name, high over all,
In hell, or earth, or sky.
Angels and men before it fall And devils fear and fly.

The entire assembly rose and sang the hymn to the accompaniment of the great organ.

Dr. Arthur, rising, expressed his regret that the failure of his voice would not permit to deliver the sermon which he had prepared to open the council, and tendered his thanks to Kev. Dr. Stephenson, president of the British Wesleyan conference, who had kindly undertaken to read it for him. Dr. Stephenson then proceeded to read the sermon. to read it for him. Dr. Stephenson then pro-ceeded to read the sermon.

At the close of the sermon, Rev. Dr.
Stephenson read a number of scripture selec-tions, the audience standing and joining in the reading. At its conclusion the sacrament of the Lord's supper was administered, Bishop Foster reading the service.

The University Chair. Recess was then taken until 2:30 o'clock When the court reassembled, the presiding officer, Bishop Keener, took his seat in the chair which is intended as a gift to the proposed American university.

The chair had been brought into the church

The chair had been brought into the church during the recess. It was constructed from two oak beams taken from the old City Road chapel, London, the corner stone of which was laid by John Wesley. It is of massive proportions, solid and firm in design and makeup. Surmounting the back of the chair is an American eagle with outspread wings, having against its breast the starred and striped shield of the United States, appropriately colored. Beneath the eagle and shield, in crimson letters, is the motto: "E Pluribus Unum." On one side of the eagle is the figure of a lion, bearing the royal arms of Great Britain. On the other side will be put the corresponding figure of a lion supporting the heraldic devices of Canada and her colonies. Immediately below the national bird and national motto is a very finely carved medallion of John Wesley, on the right and left side of which are quotations.

The arms of Christ Church college, Oxford, are painted on an oval shield on one upward continuation of the chair arm, and opposite is a blank shield, on which will be painted the arms of the American university. The armsets are like the remainder of the wookwork.

On the front of the framing, beneath the forward edge of the seat, are carved the figures "ISOI." The seat, and back of the chair are upholstered in garnet-hued embossed leather.

Wesley's Old Bible.

The Bible used during the conference is a copy of the scriptures known as the "Epworth Bible." It was used by Samuel Wesley, father of John, in the church at Epworth, and by the clergymen who succeeded him. It is loaned to the conference by Rev. Dr. W. H. Boole, of New York.

The presiding officer, Bishop Keener, opened the afternoon session by reading the seventy-second Psalm, and then the silth hymn:

High on His everlasting throne—The King of Saints His work surveys, was sung by the assembly.

Rev. Dr. William Nast, the venerable German clergyman from Cincinnati, offered a short praver, and then the council proceeded to the election of officers.

The Bishop's Address.

The bishop said:

Mr. President, Fathers and Brethren of the Second Ecumenical Methodist Conference—In the name of the citizens of Washington in general, and of its Methodist citizens in particular. I bid you a cordial welcome. We have had misgivings lest we should fail of that full measure of convenience and entertainment which becomes this august occasion, and the personal merit of 500 leaders and heroes of the vast Methodist army now gathered from all the continents on the world's map. Washington is a young city. We have no spacious palaces; no ancestral, ivy-crowned castles, fragrant with legends; no minister like that of Strasburg-on-York; no ruins of pyramid, coliseum or temple, to fascinate by ancient memories and the wealth of curious art. In fact, we are so young as yet that we have not been able to produce even a thoroughly respectable graveyard, much less historical abbey, which may teil the story and embalm the memory of our illustrious dead. Our edifices are few and have grown out of the simple necessities of the nation, but given a few centuries more, when electricity or compressed air will be the world's motive power on land and sea, when two days will be ample for Atlantic ferriage and common railway speed will be a different scene, far more to satisfy the taste for art and architecture in the year of grace 5,000, when the delegates of the Ecumenical Methodist conterence shall meet in Washington to hold its one hundredth session. Brethren from the northern states, from the central west and from the far-off Pacific coast, we congratulate you because of the great commonwealths which you represent; because of the incalculable service you have rendered to the world, and because of the faith and heroism which have distinguished your work from the beginning to the present.

Brethren from Canada, we welcome you with the spirit of true Christian reciprocity. We rejoice in the union of Methodisms which you have effected, and your heroic efforts to build up your great educational system.

England, our common home, we welcome. From her we have derived the Wesleyan name and Wesleyan examples. Her Epworth is our Epworth; her preachers are our preachers; her literary achievements are our inheritance her Milton, her Shakespeare, her Hamden, her Cromwell, her Wesley are our teachers. And when we think of the world's great rulers of the distant past and of today, who sway with easy scepter and the even scales of justice, none stands higher in our esteem and love than Victoria, queen of Great Britain and Ireland, and the empress of India.

No song we sing in preference to his battle hymn, "A Strong Tower Is Our God."

Honored guests from far-off lands of the south seas, from New South Wales, New Zealand and Australia, we know the work that you have been doing and the faith which has inspired it. All sweeter shall be our commission here because of the great spaces over which you have do in and and sea to reach this place. We bid you welcome after your tossings on the tide and wave, and no presence shall we remember with grater pleasure than you, brethren, who have come from the most distant lands. In the temple of Diana, in Ephesus, there were 127 pillars, and each was the gift of a king. In this ecumenical temple there are 500 pillars, and each one is to our Methodism in Washington and our Methodism throughout the world the gift of Him who is King of kings and Lord of lords."

Dr. Carlisle's Invitation.

Carlisle, of Sp. Rev. IDr. J. H. Carlisle, of Spartanburg S. C., delivered a second address of welcome. He said the Methodist and the cotton plant had made their appearance in the south at the same time. He invited his hearers to come and look upon those cotton fields, and come and speak from southern pulpits. After meeting like this, Methodists must speal more of their concords than their discords, and fall together upon the Phillistines, whether they come from that great little island to, which all in America and the church and state looked up as the mother country and from countries of Europe, or those under the southern cross, let the spirit of Wesley give the keynote to this meeting and to their future lives.

languages. The preceding speakers had put their fingers into his pie and stolen his plums. It was the chief distinction of his life to be here, and in the capacity he did. The mother conference of Methodism most be here, and in the capacity he did. The mother conference of Methodism most affectionately greeted the conference. Foreign delegates did not need all the eloquence shown in the addresses of welcome, as they know they were welcome. They were glad to come to Washington. The name was dear to them. If there had been a time when Englishmen did not like that name, it had long passed. They admired Washington's self-sacrifice and devotion to country. The influence of such men went to make all politics a little better and a little nobler.

"God knows they need it," said Dr. Stephenson. Speaking of the first council, he said that it had done more than its most enthusiastic advocates had imagined could result. This second ecumenical conference would draw the bonds closer. The first had buried many differences, and please God they would not attend other funerals. [Applause.] If sentiment had sway, it would do more than all the processes of calculation and constitution mongering, what Methodism could do in a country where it had a fair field and favor. This conference ought to be a great spiritual power. The earlier Methodism preachers had met, not for financial purposes solely, but for spiritual quickening. The supreme want of the churches was the Holy Ghost. If the delegates opened their hearts while here to Christ, they would go back as burning torches to their churches. He held in his hand John Wesley's little Bible, from which he had read out the text in crowds and mobs, and, in his later life, in some fashionable churches to which he had been invited. That Bible was printed in 1655, and on its leaf it bore the words, in Wesley's handwriting, "Live today." This was "Wesley's message to the delegates.

The Frimitive Methodists.

The Primitive Methodists. George Green, of Glasgow, representing the Primitive Methodist church of England, the Primitive Methodist church of England, the next speaker, made a brief acknowledgement of the welcome extended. He said that the English Primitive Methodists were really the offsprings and lineal descendants of American Methodists. Seventy or eighty years ago there were many camp meetings and revivals in America. Reho came over the water to Staffordshire, and some workmen there resolved to hold one. So their Primitive church was born. They had had female ministers, and in that were a great way ahead of other Methodists. This church had sent its delegates here, and they accepted the cordial invitation held out to them. He hoped the channels of difference between the Methodists would be worn down some as a result of this council, and as the Primitive church had given up its church in Canadas in order that unity might follow, so it atood ready to make further concessions in the same interest.

Rev. R. Abercrombie, of Shrewsbury, England, delivered the last address of the day. He said he was a member of the last ecumenical conference and knew of the good that had resulted from it. He recalled the utterances of wisdom, encouragement and brotherly love of many eminent American Methodists who of many eminent American Methodists who had participated in the deliberations of that council. He represented the United Methodist Free Church in England, and said that while their members were comparatively few, yet he believed that it had added something to the sum of good that had been accomplished by the Christian church. It was essentially an evangelistic agency. He expressed the hope that from this conference will go forth a mighty spirit of influence that shall be felt throughout the world and to the end of time. At the close of Mr. Abercrombie's remarks the doxology was sung, and the first day's assisting the closed with prayer by Rev. Dr. Stephenson.

JOHN H. PARNELL

Has Some Interesting Views About His Brother.

THE FIRST RACE FOR PARLIAMENT.

Charles Stewart Parnell's Visit to Atlant Many Years Ago-As to

The two hearts on this side the Atlanti which were most keenly shocked by the news of Charles Stewart Parnell's death, were his venerable mother and his brother. The aged mother of this great figure in Irish history lives in New Jersey. A brother is temporarily residing in Atlanta. Early yesterday morning when the first vague news came over the wires a friend carried it to Mr. John H. Parnell and gently broke it to him. Mr. Parnell did not believe it could be true for as he afterwards remarked he has received similar reports three or four times before. The wires were set to working at once. Mr. Parnell sent his first message of inquiry to his mother, for he naturally supposed that the earliest news would be cabled to her. As the hours passed, message after message came confirming the report of the death and giving a few details. When word came that rheumatism was the immediate cause, and that the death was sudden, Mr Parnell gave up hope. Rheumatism of the heart is an affection of the Parnell family, and the members usually die suddenly, The telegram from his mother read as fol

Mr. John H. Parnell came to America twenty-two years ago, and soon thereafter located in Georgia. He had inherited some property in Ireland, and was comfortably sit nated in regard to means. He invested in Georgia land near West Point and went into fruit-growing extensively. His peach orchard there is famous, being the largest in the world. For years it has been his custom to visit Ire-land every twelve months. He has another brother, but Charles Stewart was more strongly attached to John H. than to the Mr. John H. Parnell is a few older than the Irish leader, and though taller, there was a striking resemblance between them. Charles Stewart looked older than he first entrance into Irish politics.

"We were at dinner one evening in Dublir when the subject of the coming election in county Wicklow came up. Charles took a leading part in the conversation and spoke with strong feeling on home rule. The company listened with close interest and some surprise at the young man's clear and forcible discussion. He was more of a thinker than we had given him credit for being. Two conservatives were offering and there were two home rule candidates who had announced their intention of standing.

"'Wicklow is our county. Why don't you stand, Charles?' I asked. Oh, I am not known and I could not get the ears of the people,' he replied.

"A few evenings later we were dining with a prother-in-law of ours in Dublin and the election came up again for discussion. The com pany said that Charles ought to stand. that night he went down to The Freema Journal's office, saw Dwyer Grey and told him that he intended to stand for County Wicklow. Grey was astonished. He knew nothing of Charles, but after they talked the natter over concluded that it would be advisable for my brother to run.

"At 1 o'clock in the morning Charles came back and told us that he was going to stand for parliament at the election, which was only about a week off. In the morning The Journal contained the announcement. It was a sensation to the old leaders. But that or the next the point was Charles could not run, as he was high sheriff of the county. He wanted to resign, but the lord lieutenant would not let him off. So he could not stand, and he said to me, 'John, you must run.' And I did come out as a candidate. Charles stumped the county for me in the few remaining days, and he attracted attention everywhere. The people took to him instantly. But the time was too short. I got 700 votes out of 1,700, and was defeated; but I was the means of defeating one of the conservative candidates who was obnoxious, and whom the people wanted to get out.

"That canvass brought Charles to the front, "That canvass brought Charles to the front, and soon afterwards he stood for election himself, for the county of Dublim, and was defeated. Later, though, he was elected for the county of Meath, and represented it in parliament. After that he was elected for Cork, Mayo and Meath, and chose to represent Cork. Always thereafter he represented Cork.

"His active entrance into politics was as I have told you, and was precipitated by my suggestion. Golbraith, of Trinity college, took him up and pushed him, noticeably at the ceremonies attending the corner stone laying of the O'Con-

"Charles Stewart Parnell. inherited a large "Charles Steward Farnells inherited a large property from an uncle. It was worth over one hundred thousand pounds, but was mortgaged for £40,000. He used up all his means in the Irish cause, but the people of Ireland came to his relief, and made him a handsome present. "Charles took that money and invested it in Ireland. Publin was importing her paving stones from Wales. Charles hunted and hunted for a stone that would do, and had a great deal of trouble finding something that would answer. Finally he discovered something on a cousin's land which he believed would suit. So at night he took a man or two and went to look at it. He wanted me to go along, but I did not. His cousin, Lord Carysford, was a large landed proprietor, and was opposed to Charles, politically. Charles was afraid his cousin would not sell to him, and bought the land through other parties. Lord Carysford said afterwards: "Why, Charley, our political difference so would not have made any difference so with their paving stones, and the importations from Wales stopped."

Charles always wanted his brother. John to return to Ireland and enter politics. "You have your mission, Charles, and I have mine." John H. would reply. "On our walks he rarely talked of public affairs, and one would never have guessed from his conversations what a part he took in national politics," says his brother. "I knew his heart better than any one else in the world probably, and I know that he always had the highest and purest esteem for women. The scandal in which he was involved the last year of his life was a cruel injustice to him and the woman whose name was connected with his. There was cruel injustice to him and the woman whose name was connected with his. There was much back of all that, and he and Mrs. O'Shes much back of all that, and he and Mrs. O'Shea sacrificed their names from a patriotic motive. I had a letter from my mother today, and she knows this, too. She had just heard from Charles. Mrs. O'Shea is a good and noble woman, and has been terribly slandered. Charles first knew her well when he was in Kilmainham jail, where she was sent to him as an emissary by Gladstone. This rheumatism which killed my brother was aggravated by that imprisonment, and Mr. Gladstone is responsible for his untimely death."

The Kiser building is the last place that one would think of going on a 'possum hunt, but a big, fat 'possum, who looked as if he had just climbed down from a persimmon tree, was captured in that building yesterday.

Harry Wood and O. A. Borneman were the capturers, and nothing more like a 'possum dog than a street arab, treed him.

Early yesterday morning a small street arab discovered some fearful varmint secreted under the sign in front of Beerman and Silverman's store, on Pryor street.

Harry Wood, who has caught many a fat 'possum, was reminded of old days, when he lifted up the sign and beheld the grinning 'possum sitting up comfortably, enjoying the morning breeze.

He begged him at once.

His 'possumship had evidently come in from the country to enjoy a visit to the city, and had took up his lodging under Beerman's

Unfortunately this young man was a deaf mute, and after frolicking in the woods until the next train arrived, he boarded the train with his companions. All of the young men had their tickets except the deaf mute, but he walked into the coach and took his seat as complacently as his companions.

The conductor walked into the car, and yelling "tickets," proceeded to take up the pasteboard slips and punch them in regulation style. On reaching the party of young men from Albany he was given tickets by all except the deaf mute, and reaching over to him the young fellow began making signs in a most vigorous manner. The conductor, of course, did not understand this, and one of the party then said to him: "That young fellow is deaf and dumb. He has lost his ticket and that is what he is trying to explain to you."

"You can't work any such racket as that on me," said the conductor. "I've been there before." The young men insisted that the young fellow was deaf and dumb but the conductor would not believe it. Only a few days ago when Dowdy was at Tennille an effort was made to take him dead or alive. A posse surrounded him, but his friends rushed to the rescue and for a few moments bullets whizzed, knives flashed and Dowdy made good his escape.

Later Marshai Morris and his aides-de-camp, mounted on swift horses, made a raid on Dowdy's stronghold at his father's home; but while they were galloping down the road a the young men said: "Let me go in the other car and try to borrow the money to pay this young man's way?" The conductor I've got no time to wait for such as that. If you can't pay the money you all must get off the train."

With this the conductor reached for the bell cord and jerking the rope stopped the train, and being three miles and a half from town, all four of the young men had to walk

ALMOST OUT OF JAIL.

John Williams Seems to Be a Hard Man to Keep.

Union, S. C., October 7.—[Special.]—Some time ago John Williams, alias Ashemore Mitchell, a prisoner in jail here, made his escape by overpowering the sheriff. He was caught two months ago in Atlanta, and brought back here. Sheriff Long took good care to put shackles on him, on both hands. This morning in the court his case was called. Sheriff Long went down to the jail to bring Mitchell to the courtroom, On going to his cell it was found that Mitchell had cut one of his shackles in two, and had the other one of his shackles in two, and had the other almost in two.

This caused suspicion in the mind of Sheriff Long, and upon further investigation it was found that Mitchell had, in some way, obtained a two-inch auger, and had nearly bored his way out through the top of the jail, and it is thought that in less than two hours he would have made his escape.

She is perfectly harmless and spends her time going to and from the jail.

An Extraordinary Scene at Mt. Carmel Meeting House—Bird Jackson Be-comes Suddenly Insane.

McDonough, Ga., October 7 .- [Special.]-Such a sensation as Bird Jackson created at Mt. Carmel church last Sunday at 11 o'clock is something unparalleled in the history of Henry county. Rev. H. L. Embry, of East Point, was there assisting Rev. W. J. Cotter to carry on a protracted meeting. Rev. Mr. Embry was preaching one of his usual good sermons that day to a large congregation, when suddenly Bird Jackson rose from his seat, in the rear of the church, and walked up to the pulpit and said: "Do you know what you are doing?" Mr. Embry replied: "I think I do." "I don't think you do. It don't look to me like you know what you are talking about. You look like the devil to me," replied Jackson. Then the preacher asked some of the men to take Jackson out of the house.

There was a general uproar and excitemen in the church. Women were trembling with fear. Several men laid hold of Jackson and proceeded to take him out. He ordered them not to touch him, saying they would have trouble if they interfered with him. He told the men he was tired hearing that preacher, and he was going to have Camp, of Jonesboro, to preach to those fools. They took Jackson away from the church to his home, and he ed quiet for a while. He had suddenly lost his mind and was a mantac. That night he took his mule and rode all night trying to find Rev. Mr. Camp to come and preach.

Next morning he tried to commit suicide by jumping from a tree, a distance of twenty-five eet. The jump broke or sprained his back, and while lying on the ground he cut his own throat saverely. He was found in that condi-tion and carried home where he now is. Jack-son has heretofore been of a quiet disposition except when drunk. He is a farmer near Mt. Carmel church, has a wife but no children. He marired Miss Davis, of Locust Grove.

Such an occurrence at a church was never known before in this county. Rev. Mr. Em-bry did not seem the least bit excited when he approached him in the pulpit, but seemed to see at once that Jackson was under mental derangement.

CEDARTOWN, Ga., October 7.—[Special.]—
The reception given by the land company in honor of the Philadelphia guests, was one of the most brilliant entertainments ever seen in this city. Refreshments were served and they enjoyed themselves to their hearts' content. A delightful dance was given after the reception. The land sale began this morning at 10 o'clock. Colonel Wister, from Philadelphia, president of the land company, made a short, but very taking talk. Colonel Waddell was then called on and in his usual style told the crowd of Cedartown and her many resources. The sale then began, northern men bidding liberally. The sale continues tomorrow.

The death of Charles Stewart Parnell closes one of the most remarkable chapters of the rise and fall of a public man ever written.

He forced the Irish question to the front of British politics, and, notwithstanding the aberrations of the last year or two of his life, his name will figure in history as the savior of the Irish

In 1870 there was not in the whole world a more dejected and despondent race of people than the Irish. English might had crushed out their manhood; English greed had robbed them to the point of pauperism; their only chance to figure in society was as sycophants to English ideas, and their only safety for the future lay in flight from their native land. Nor were all their woes due to English domination. A large section of the people-the descendants of placeholders-truckled to the enemy, and were the worst foes to their kith and kin.

The people had just emerged from the disastrous experience of Fenianism. That movement was the last struggle of a dying body to spurn the heel of the oppressor. Irish seats in the British parliament were filled by the most contemptible crowd of squireens whose presence had ever cursed a country. Those of Ireland's public men who were true to their country were utterly impracticable, and their highest idea of statesmanship was to secure election to parliament, and then to rely upon the policy of abstention to call attention to their wrongs. This was the policy of Martin and Mitchell.

The Fenian trials brought into prominence Isaac Butt, as the attorney of the defendants. Butt was an able lawyer, but a thorough toady to England. His service in behalf of the prisoners opened his eyes to the sufferings of his native country, and in a mild sort of way he became a homeruler. Every effort he made in that direction, however, was neutralized by his excessive zeal in attesting his loyalty to the crown. But he gathered around him several young men upon whose shoulders the cloak of loyalty did not weigh so heavily; who had all the patriotism of Martin and Mitchell, without their impracticable ideas; whose policy was to occupy their seats in parliament, and by making the Irish question paramount to all others, force attention to it. Prominent among those young men

Charles Stewart Parnell. Parnell had just attained his majority. He belonged to a family noted in Ireland for sympathy with the cause of the people. Sir John Parnell, his paternal grandfather, who had been a member of the Irish parliament, fought the act of the union into the last ditch. His maternal grandfather, Commodore Stewart, was the old "Ironsides" of the American navy. Here, then, was the man upon whose shoulders fell the mantle of Isaac Butt, when the latter, fortunately for his cause, passed from the hannts of men.

The story of Parnell since that date is familiar to the public. Entering parliament as the leader of twenty-six men, out of a membership of over six hundred, he so effectually blocked business that not even the supply bills could be passed. For every English bill which he permitted to come to a vote, some concession for Ireland was wrung as a preliminary. The whole contingent were repeatedly suspended from membership, only to discover, in some old precedent, the means by which to be on hand to block the next vote. Premier Gladstone, representing the liberal party, found it necessary to throttle free speech in parliament in order to get through any business at all.

By dexterously swinging his forces the Irish leader first overthrew one cabinet and then another. Despise Parnell as they might, and hate Ireland as they did, the leaders of both political parties were compelled to take the Irishman into their negotiations, and to plead for terms. When pleading failed to accomplish its purpose, the prison doors were closed upon Parnell and his associates. It soon became evident that Parnell in prison was even more powerful than Parnell free. When he came forth, it was as the victor in a game of diplomacy with the government. The great parliamentary struggle of 1885 crowned Parnell with such a victory as an Irishman had never gained before. It witnessed the surrender of the British government to the Irish cause. It presented 86 Irish members out of 103 uncompromisingly pledged to Ireland first before all things. It made a convert to homerule of the greatest living Englishman, who made the single ages, had not mouth enough. The trouble But these are not to be secured by any plank of the Irish party the central lank of the British liberal party.

This was work enough to win fame for any man. If Parnell's career have ended then, and the work have been taken up by other hands, it would have been better for his fame. The brilliant victory which Parnell had won over the vile slanders of The London Times was totally obscured by the O'Shea scandal. There is every reason to believe that for the last four years Parnell has been the victim of a diseased mind, falling, unfortunately, into the clutches of a shameless woman, who cared not for the wreck she made, so that she was successful in her mad ambition.

Now that death has closed the story, charity will draw a veil over the misfortune of Parnell's declining years, and the statesman who led his people within sight of victory will be remembered. The magnificent leadership, the skillful diplomacy, which marked the parliamentarian; the popular enthusiasm which greeted the leader on the hustings; the confidence with which a whole nation trusted the uncrowned king, will stand forth prominently as giving Charles Stewart Parnell the brightest page in Irish history.

He is dead, but his cause lives.

A New American Bible. And so we are to have a new Bible-an American Bible! The fate of the last revised version should e a warning. That monument of scholarship and industry has been quietly let alone by the people, and it is not likely that they will ever take it up. Our new American Bible will be the work of Professor Paul Haupt, head of the Semitic seminary of the Johns Hopkins University, and some of our most distinguished Old Testament scholars. It is proposed to include in this translation not only the Old and the New Testaments, but also the Apocrypha and the Pseudepigrapha. The entire work will fill about six large vol-

The eminent scholars engaged in the work, which is now under way, declare that both the authorized and the revised versions of the Bible are to most people a book of seven seals. They think that the new translation should be in modern English. Many archaisms and imitations of the Hebrew especially in the authorized version, are hopelessly obscure to the average reader. Many people look upon the Bible more as a repository of familiar quotations than a book for connected reading. The new Bible proposes to give a free and faithful, and at the same time an idiomatic, translation of the original text, with explanations of a historical, geographical and archæological nature. The modern reader is to be placed, so to speak, where the contemporaries of the sacred writers stood-that is. they will be aided by pictorial representations of Biblical sights, implements and monuments, to see the historic aspect of

This is only a brief general outline of the plan and purpose of the work. Its managers announce that they do not intend to supersede the authorized version. Their object is to furnish a companion book that will be read connectedly, while the old version will still be referred to as authority. After completing the translation, a special committee will go over it to improve the style from a literary point of view.

It is all very magnificent, but the schem will awaken no welcoming response in the popular heart. The revised version of a few years ago made no headway. People were so accustomed to the familiar words and phrases of the authorized version that they could not look with favor upon the proposed substitute. It will be the same way with the American Bible. It may be regarded as a valuable curiosity, but when a man is hungry for words that will give him comfort and consolation he will go back to the old

Book of Books, This talk about modern English and literary improvement is ludicrous bosh. The finest writers of our time continue to read and re-read the authorized version. They regard it as the most valuable aid in the formation of a good style that can possibly be found and utilized. The orators and writers whose spoken and written words have left the deepest impress upon the minds and hearts of the people have, without an exception, studied the old Bible.

The learned tinkers who have undertaken a new version will waste time and labor. Their six volumes of modern literary Eng lish will remain unopened. The philoso pher, the scholar, the plain man of the people, will all stand by the Book of their

What Great Britain Needs.

We believe it will be generally conceded. when the facts are known, that Mr. Gladstone was very unfortunate in the speech he made at Newcastle the other day. It is true it was a remarkable, nay, a powerful speech, for a man of four score years to make. It was brilliant, aggressive and bristling with the earnestness of a man who feels that his life-work is not completed until he shall be the means of furthering the principles of popular liberty.

Nevertheless, before he made it Mr. Gladstone forgot to consult with Field Marshal Murat Halstead, the great war-horse from Ohio. The result is that Mr. Halstead is not at all pleased with some of the suggestions of the great commoner. Mr. Gladstone is of the opinion that the Egyptian policy of Great Britain is a mistaken one. and he suggests that the occupation of that country should cease.

This alarms Mr. Halstead, who declare that such a suggestion is mischievous, and he then proceeds to map out for the benefit of such tories as may be concealed in Brooklyn the policy that Great Britain should pursue. "England," says Mr. Halstead, with something of a flourish, "needs a statesman to say: France and Italy, take all you want of Africa, leaving Algeria; Russia, Constantinople is yours, take it in peace and give Austria, Greece and Italy some compensation. Mr. Gladstone, beholding the multitude of topics, almost echoed the wish of the father of the poets for ten mouths and ten tongues wherew to speak, and there was laughter at the idea that Mr. Gladstone, of all men of all the seemed to be that he fancied as he had not ade a speech for several months all mankind wanted to hear him at length about everything."

We believe that Great Britain would make money by employing Mr. Halstead to take charge of her affairs. He could prosecute this great work and still find time to edit his Brooklyn paper.

The Gift of Inconsistency.

It is frequently the habit of superficial minds to make a great to-do over what they term "inconsistency." Mr. Gladstone has been a shining mark for these small critics. and his recent speech at Newcastle-truly remarkable effort for so old a man-has already been made the text for numerous piddling comments on his lack of incon-

What is truly remarkable in the career of Mr. Gladstone—and there are various manifestations of it in his latest speech—is the courage with which he faces the truth as he sees it, and the candor with which he states it. His speech shows that his mind, even in the eighties, is in a constant state of progress and development. He is still a student. At twenty-six he was a tory, glorying in the monarchical institutions of Great Britain At eighty-two he is a passionate advocate of the form of human liberty known as democ-

What seems to be inconsistency in Mr. Gladstone's career is simply the growth and development of one of the most remarkable minds of the age. Most men look back on the follies of youth with regret. To be consistent they should repeat them in old age. The inconsistency that is the result of study, thought and experience, is the element which gives the motive power to human progress-it is the spark that gives vitality to the spirit of human liberty.

William Outwitted by Victoria. If the Berlin correspondent of The New York Herald has given the facts of the case, Queen Victoria in her old age has completely outgeneraled the Emperor William in an important matter of diplomacy. As the story goes, last summer, when William was the queen's guest at Osborne, the emperor frankly told her that Germany was menaced by socialism within and by France without. He felt that his financial resources would not enable him to maintain his large standing army twelve months longer. Under the circumstances it would be necessary for Germany to fight France not later than the spring of 1892.

Victoria replied that she hoped to see the peace of Europe maintained while she lived, and that in her judgment it would be criminal for any ruler or statesman to precipitate a war before it became absolutely necessary.

This ended the conversation, and the queen then requested Lord Salisbury to reason with the emperor. The premier declined, upon the ground that his counsel would be resented, and would only make matters worse. He advised the queen to write an autograph letter to the czar of Russia, explaining the situation, and urging him in the interests of peace to make friendly advances towards France. If that was done the Emperor William would see that Russia would not allow France to be wantonly attacked, and he would then change his policy. Lord Salisbury also suggested that it would be a good thing for England to make friendly advances toward France about the time Russia acted in the matter.

Victoria at once followed this advice. The letter was sent to the czar, who appreciated the critical nature of the situation, and invited the French fleet to visit Cron stadt. At the same time the queen invited the fleet to visit Portsmouth. As The Herald correspondent remarks, the rest is a matter of history. The young emperor realized that with Russia and England on the best possible terms with France, it was not the time for him to declare war, unless it became absolutely necessary.

In this instance the queen had decidedly the best of it. The young emperor had his head too full of warlike thoughts to think of diplomacy, and through that channel his game was blocked while he was dreaming of a repetition of the Franco-Prussian struggle. But a year, a month, a day may change all this. If Germany is determined to fight she cannot be held back very long. Victoria may die, or the unexpected may happen. There are many possible conditions that will leave Germany and France free to leap at each other's throats.

The "Literary Convention" Postponed. The gentlemen-doubtless "all honorable men"-who issued a call for a literary convention to meet in Nashville some time during the present month, have revoked their call, and propose to await a more convenient season. The whole movement, as we see it, was a mistake, probably from a failure to realize that literature is less a matter of sentiment, political or otherwise, than of sheer business. Book-making-not only as to its mechanical feature, but also as to its purely esthetic features-is not less practical, and even prosaic, than the manufacture of pig iron or the construction of a railway. If it is undertaken in a spirit of revenge for injuries, real or faucied, it lacks the right sort of inspiration, and failure is inevitable. And yet again, to expect by any short and easy process to build up a literature worth the name in a twelvemonth or a decade, is an absurdity on its face. A literature really great is a growth like the coral islands of the South seas. Nowhere in this country, neither in New York nor Boston, is there more than the glimpse of a literature comparable to the literary product of the older civilizations of Europe. Something has been said, in this connection of The Edinburgh Review as a conservator of Scotch civilization. If we are correctly advised, that publication was projected for no such provincial purposes, but rather in the interest of the whig party, which was sadly in need of a first-class quarterly to champion its policy. We agree with the committee which inaugurated this Nashville movement, that we need a representative southern magazine, not so much for partisan purposes as for allround literary development. Nor do we accept the statement so often made, that there is a deplorable lack of thorough culture in the south. Tested by a per capita estimate, the disparity, in this regard, between the two great divisions of the country, is not sufficient to awaken any serious alarm. What we specially need in the south i two or more large publishing houses, centrally located, with a heavy bank balance.

amount of pow-wowing by gowned university professors or professional ink-slingers, many of whom know as little of the publishing business as Baby Cleveland.

There are scores of southern writers who are doing most excellent work on northern and English publications at a fair rate of compensation. We ought, and in due time will, have a home market for such literary wares. The outlook for this result was never better than at this present writing.

The Copyright Law.

Remarking on the new copyright law, The Boston Advertiser calls attention to the fact that "the privileges of the new law have been accepted by only four European nations, Great Britain, France, Belgium and Switzerland."

This is no doubt very interesting as a mere matter of information, but it is more important to know how the new copyright law has benefited American authors. Has it given them any greater advantages in the British market than they had before? This, it should be remembered, was the object of the law; we were to do justice to foreign authors in order that foreign nations might do justice to our authors. The market we were seeking to open to American authors was that of Great Britain and her colonies, and the argument was that if we would protect the rights of British authors here, Great Britain would protect the rights of our authors there.

It is found, however, that our relations with Great Britain, in respect of copyright, are precisely what they were before the new law was passed. The matter has not been simplified at all. Unless the great publishing houses in both countries have trade reciprocity, the pirates will still have their pickings, for there will always be new and readable authors on both sides who will find it inconvenient or impossible to comply with the cumbersome demands of the law.

We have no doubt the new copyright law is a big thing, but thus far there have been no striking developments under its pro visions.

EDITORIAL COMMENT. THE CRITIC has the following item, which will of considerable interest in Atlanta, where Miss Crim has many friends and admirers: "A curious literary coincidence has come to ight, in certain striking resemblances of theme perative Duty,' in Harper's Magazine, and a short story by Miss Matt Crim, which appears in the October Century under the title, 'Was It an Ex-ceptional Case?' In each story the heroine is a girl of mixed blood, adopted, educated and brought up in refined society, and kept in e of her parentage until she had arrived alood. In each case a lover is relinquished upon the revelation of the truth of the heroine's origin. There is also a similarity between the two stories in that each girl is adopted by an aunt, and in the fact that these women both confess the deception which has been practicedone to a physician and the other to a priest, the penitent in each case dying soon after the confes-sion has been made. The editor of The Century having sent Mr. Howells advance sheets of Miss Crim's story, the distinguished novelist writes from Intervale, N. H., as follows: from Intervale, N. H., as follows:

"I have been extremely interested in that story of Miss Crim's which you have kindly sent me, and in the very extraordinary coincidence of parts of it with my own story of 'An Imperative Duty.' You tell me that 'Was It An Exceptional Case?' was written in 1889; my story was imagined many years ago, and actually written last year, after being first cast in quite a different form. So I cannot account for the resemblance upon the principle of telepathy; but must fall back upon mere blind chance, which frequently sends the same invention in duplicate and triplicate to the patent office. I am glad you have given me the opportunity to testify to the fact that Miss Crim's story was in no possible wise suggested by mine; I do was in no possible wise suggested by mine; I do not even think that mine was stolen from hers. You are very welcome to print this letter if you believe it will preclude the question that might arise with some."

ETCHED AND SKETCHED.

The modern minstrel king, W. S. Cleveland is a young fellow not more than thirty years old and handsome, and one of the astlers whose names are written with a great big H. I suppose no one man in the show business of his years-probably none twice his age—has handled as much money as he. Last year he had four companies and the name of Cleveland was heard through the length and breadth of the land. It is an shows, but Cleveland comes up smiling with two first-class shows this year, and is making money where he lost it last. One secret of the success that has been his is that he is an incessant worker, and when he can give his own attention to his enterprises they are certain of uccess. Four were more than he could keep an eye on at once, and the season being bad from the start he was a heavy loser. By just such jumps as the one from Utah to Georgia he keeps in touch with his two companies; and as this season is generally good, he is profiting by it and making money. He certainly deserves to succeed.

Bishop Talbot is so peculiarly fitted for church work in the western field where he is now engaged, that the members of the standmittee of the diocese of Georgia appreciate his grounds for declining to accept the call from this state. Bishop Talbot is really indispensable to the Episcopal church in Wyoming. His fitness for the work there i remarkable. A story or two told by Rev. C. H. Strong, of St. John's parish, Sa will illustrate this. Mr. Strong spent the summer of 1890 in the west, and saw much o Bishop Talbot, "He has a magnetic person ality which attracts cowboy and the most highly refined lady alike," says Mr. Strong. "Whe the bishop goes into a town he drops around to the saloons which, in many mining villages, constitute nine-tenths of the busines and he announces to the men that he will preach at a certain hour at a certain place, and he invites all the boys to hear him. They generally go, too. In one town the champion bully formed a strong attachment for the and once after the bishop had called at the bars and extended his usual invitation, this leading tough citizen emphasized it by following him and saving in each saloon: 'Sav. boys, the bishop's going to preach tomorrow Hank Brown's. Every blamed one of you had better show up there, and sharp at the hour, too, or I'll be around on Monday to see yo and the cuss who hasn't a good excuse had better be ready to do some shooting.""

In another town a ranchman tacked up a notis" to the miners and cowboys telling them to put their guns behind the door. This man is thoroughly in touch with life of that kind. He understands the men with whom he comes in contact and they are strangely fond of him. His influence three out his field is the marvel of all who have seen evidences of it. HEARD IN GEORGIA.

The Columbus Enquirer-Sun tells a strange story of a curiosity in the shape of a swell-defined profile of a female figure in pewter, measuring about two and one-half by three inches and weighing four and five-eighth ounces. The figure, which is plain from about the head to the knees, is formed in a sort of canopy, and the manner in which it is fashioned, as well as the source from which it came, is exceedingly curious and interesting.

As soon as the lead be-came cool and solidified she prized it from the bricks with a case-knife and was astonished beyond measure to find it fashfoned in the shape of a female figure. It was carried to Pekor's jewelry store yesterday morning, where Mr. Pekor, investigation, pronounced the material pewter. How the metal came in the woo omething that cannot be explained. The wood was in an ordinary load, purchased from Birdsong & Scheussier, and was the only piece, so far, that has proved to be a pewter mine, as it were. The fact that this pewter was inside of the log, and when melted formed in the curious shape described, is certainly very singular, and it will be

EDITOR CONSTITUTION—I notice the vote in the couse on the railroad bill known as the Kemp bill. I am satisfied, from a careful examination of rote and consideration of the matter, that the nistake Mr. Kemp made in his bill was than made it too general. In other words, his bill affect all the railroads in the state of Georgia. should have made the provisions of the bill ap simply to roads chartered by the state of George especially the Georgia, Central, and Southwest railroads. If he had done this, putting a clause his bill authorizing the governor on recomment tion to institute suits to repeal the charters these companies in the event they did not comp with the terms of the bill, he would have had much larger support, and instead of getting on 23 votes he might have gotten 90. There is a goo deal of difference when a bill is suggested bearing on the lines above named and one that affects railroads alike. A good many men who are h to work up the sentiment against the railro and a good many newspapers which favor legi tion against the railroads named on the line gested by Mr. Kemp, are very much opposed to bill that will affect all the railroads in the stay it would not be legal for him to do it, but if

The Smith substitute for the Berner bill will come before the senate committee this week. The impression seems to prevail that it will not pass that body. It is clear that the kind of legislation proposed has the hill is not necessary for the protection of

There are features to the bill to which there as no serious objections. These features are foun in the Chappell substitute. That substitute is wholly satisfactory to the people and the security holders. It gives the railroad commission power to regulate the roads when, by combination, they could prevent desirable competition and impose higher transportation rates than there would likely be if there was competition. But then the railroad commission has absolute control of transportation rates. It can fix their maxim them all the protection they may ask for or an entitled to. Why, then, should the commission be given power to drag railroads into the cour for the purpose of breaking up their combina

A HISTORY OF THE CHURCH.

Dr. McDonald Delivers a Short Address List of Articles Placed in the Corner Stone-Statement of Mr. Adair.

At 4 o'clock yesterday afternoon the corner stone of the Second Baptist church was laid with simple and beautiful ceremonies. The attendance was large, considering the threatening weather. The corner stone was polished as smooth as glass and upon its center were engraved these "Organized 1854. Built 1891." A platform was raised above the foundation of the building and upon this stood the crowd of ladies and gentlemen. Most of the leading Baptists of Atlanta were present. The Orpheus Club, under the direction of Mr. S. H. Cole, sang with excellent effect, "I Love Thy Kingdom, Lord.' Dr. J. B. Hawthorne made a prayer suitable to the occasion. The Pastor's Remarks.

At the conclusion of Dr. Hawthorne's address Dr. Henry McDonald spoke as follows:
"In 1854, eleven gentlemen and eight ladies met and adopted the constitution of the Second Baptist church of Atlanta. They built a house out of their poverty-a house dedicated to the service of God. I am glad, my friends, to meet you here on this occasion. I am especially glad that so many young people are here. It is pleasant to think that after we are gone these boys and girls will be here worshipping the same Lord that we now serve. There is nothing more encouraging than the spread of the gospel in this country. It is a remarkable fact that in the year 1800 one out of every fifteen people was a communicant. In 1880, with ten times the number of people, one out of every five was a communicant. There is derful prosperity in our religious life. Never before was such liberality shown in church work. All this is done freely. The people who have contributed of their means ouild this edifice have been actuated by a Christian spirit. Every stone, every ornament and every brick in this church ought to be the expression of love to God. There is inspiration in every step in their progress of the work. This is unbought, and there is state influence back of it. We erect houses for the glory of God, and our people invite the weary and heavily laden to come here. We do this for the welfare of humanity. We may rest assured that it is only as the people believe the gospel that the power of salvation is put forth. One of the first contributions I re-ceived for the building fund came from a little boy, the son of a Baptist preacher, Mr. Mitchell, whom many of you know. He was the classmate of Judge Marshall J. Clarke. The boy had gathered his pennies before he died, and the fund amounted to $1. He told his mother that he wanted to contribute this church. I received this with more tenderness and more gratitude to God than any that came in. When the church was first organized in 1854, the original nineteen bers all gave liberally to build a house of worship. One of these was the father of Governor McDaniel, who came here and gave largely out of his limited means. We deposit the names of these nineteen in the box beneath the corner stone. I rejoice to know that when we have gone, when I have gone and my life's works are finished, that others will be here to follow in our steps. I thank God for the hope that succeeding generations will come into this church and glory God and honor His name. What a glory and blessing to do those things that live after we are gone. I rejoice in your gathering here to participate in these exercises. The prospects are bright for the early completion of the building. I rejoice that everything connected with it is in such good hands; that the building committee is so efficient; that the superintendent of the work is so capable and ss; that all the co-laborers are animated by the right spirit. I am glad to see so many ministers of our church here, and if the weather was not so threatening would expect to hear short addresses from Dr. Hawthorne and others, but we must omit some features. We have arranged a variety of appropriate articles, each one of which has some special significance to be placed in the corner stone." nificance, to be placed in the corner stone."

Dr. McDonald here enumerated the articles, which were immediately deposited by Mr. George S. Lowndes.

A Statement About the Work. The subjoined paper was prepared by Mr.

and igures:
ATLANTA, Ga., October 7.—I have been requested to make a statement in regard to the progress of the church building. The foundations speak for themselves more practically than I can speak for them. It is well known to you that we have had great difficulties in getting the work let out and were delayed about six months before making a final contract. The work was at last awarded to our brother, J. H. Mathews, a member of this church, whom we have found to be perfectly capable and energetic. The work has been rapidly pushed by him ever since he commenced. He is thoroughly reliable and a man of good judgment and business casince he commenced. He is thoroughly reliable and a man of good judgment and business ca-pacity. The foundations are well laid and will stand the test of time. The basement story is built of Lithonia granite. The body of the church will be pink sandstone from Sewanes, Teim., trimmed with grey stone from Ohio. While the structure will be solid and massive, the different colored stones and solid and massive, the different colored stones and carvings will make it highly ornamental, and when completed will be a suitable building to front the new capitol of the Empire State, and will rank with the handsomest church buildings in the south. The plans were made by Huita & Lamb, of Chattanooga, Tenn., and revised twice by the direction of the building committee, to their entire satisfaction.

Lamb, of Chattanooga, Tenn., and revised twice by the direction of the building committee, to their entire satisfaction.

The work has been under the supervision of our worthy and efficient secretary, Brother George S. Lowndes, who has been untiring in his attentions. About thirty thousand dollars have been expended thus far. Nearly all of the material is on the ground and has been paid for.

The stringency of the money market has made it impracticable to cash the notes, some of which that are due are yet unpaid, but through the efforts of our treasurer, G. B. Adair, and the kindness of our good brother. E. H. Thornton, of the Neal Loan and Banking Company, we have been enabled to go ahead without any delay since the commencement.

The building can be finished and furnished complete, we hope, inside of $75,000. Our contractor promises to have the roof on and the basement opened for service before the meeting of the southern Baptist convention in May. We trust his expectations will be realized. Respectfully submitted, Chairman Building Committee.

A Short Historical Sketch. The history of the Second Baptist church has been eventful. In July, 1854, several members of the First Baptist church, of Atlanta, believing that there was room in the city for another church, obtained letters of dismission for the purpose of organizing the Second Baptist church. The evening of September 1stof the same year, nineteen persons—having previously agreed upon their articles of faith—were solemnly recognized as the Second faith—were solemnly recognized as the Second Baptist church of Atlanta, by a council con-Baptist church of Atlanta, by a council convoked to consider their request. These charter members were: B. F. Bomar, I. O. McDaniel, P. E. McDaniel, I. M. Myers, T. B. Vesey, Joseph Oglesby, W. Richardson, F. H. Coleman, Francis Lipham, Sarah E. L. Bomar, N. B. McDaniel, R. J. McDaniel, C. I. McDaniel, R. Wets, A. Wells, Mary Bullard, E. Shurburn, E. Richardson, M. Oglesby. Immediately after organization, the first church conference was held, the Rev. Jesse H. Campbell acting as moderator, and Dr. B. F. Bomar as church clerk. After some efforts to secure an eligible lot on which to to secure an eligible lot on which to build a church one was found. The aggregate build a church one was found. The aggregate wealth of the nineteen original members was inconsiderable, so it was not easy for them to raise, unassisted by outside Baptists, enough money to erect even a modest structure. Some fourteen thousand dollars was raised, more than half of it coming from these charter members.

The first pastor of the church was Rev. Charles M. Irwin. He was elected to the of-fice August 25, 1855. During the latter part of this year the basement room of the building-was sufficiently completed to be used for public worship. Mr. Irwin remained in the pastorate but a short time. He was succeeded by the Rev. T. U. Wilkes, who was called to the care of the chuch December 21, 1856, and continued to serve them until August 7, 1858. In the summer of this year the church editice was completed and dedicated, Rev. N. M. Crawford preaching the sermon on the occasion. He died in Arkansas in 1866. On the 4th of November, 1858, Rev. John T.

On the stager November, 1898, Rev. John T. Clarke became paster of the church—continuing in the office three years.

At a meeting of the church held on the 11th of December, 1861, the Rev. W. T. Brantly, D.D., was unanimously elected pastor. In August, 1863, the church was received into manufaction by the Control association. August, 1863, the church was received into membership by the Central association. In 1864 the church was dispersed by the evacuation of the city. In 1870 the church edifice was enlarged at a cost of $20,000. For six months Dr. H. H. Tucker preached regularly. Dr. Brantly resigned his pastoral position in 1871. Dr. A. T. Spalding succeeded him and served until October, 1881. December 9th, 1881, the Rev. Henry McDonald, D.D., of Richmond, Va., was unanimously called. He came in response to that call, and has since discharged his duties in a most satisfactory manner. He is one of the best pastors and ablest preachers the church has ever had, and is universally beloved. Under his administration the church has prospered. Its membership has grown steadily and rapidly until it has reached about nine hundred. Last year, has reached about nine hundred. Last year, has reached about nine hundred. Last year, as the annual report shows, the church expended some sixteen thousand dollars. In addition to this, about sixty thousand dollars was subscribed for the new church building. The general committee consists of the following members: A. D. Adair, Henry Hillyer, John T. Pendleton, Porter King, E. H. Thornton, Green B. Adair, George M. Brown, George S. Lowndes and Tom Day.

The Davy Crocketts Driven Over the City Yesterday

BY THE GATE CITY

They Visit the Capitol and Meet with Warm Reception—A Speech of Wel-come and the Response.

The Davy Crockett hook and ladder company spent yesterday in a most delightful nanner, looking over the city.

Wherever they went with their handsom brown uniforms and caps they were objects of interest and were handsomely treated.

They are the guests of the Gate City Guard while here, and by them have been entertained in the most hospitable manner. Yesterday morning at 9:30 o'clock, Captain Kendrick, Lieutenant Roberts, and other members called at the Kimball to drive the Crocketts over the city. Twenty-five carriages were driven up and the party given seats in the carriages with some member of the Guard, or other distinguished citizens. Chief Joyner, in his little red wagon drove at the head of the procession, with Chief H. G. Lee, of the Davy Crocketts. In the next carriage were Captain Kendrick, Lieutenant Satterlee, P. J. Schuster and H. G. Holliday. Then followed the other members of the party and the Guards.

Colonel W. L. Calhoun rode beside Mr. Hiram McNamee, commander of the D. B.

Sleight post, G. A. R., No. 331. Out Peachtree street, lined with its many handsome homes, the visitors were driven and points of interest were shown to them by members of the Guard. A visit was made to Piedmont park and after the visitors had been shown over the grounds they were driven by South Boulevard to Fort Walker. Here they alighted, and while the band discoursed sweet music, viewed the park.

The next place visited was the Confederate Veterans' Home. Here again all alighted, and were shown through the home by Colonel Calhoun. They were much pleased with the been made by the state in not accepting it.

From the soldiers' home the driven back to the city by Georgia avenue and Pryor street and then to the state capitol. At the Capitol.

They reached the capitol about 1 o'clock, and were escorted into the gallery of the house by the Guard. The handsomely uniformed party almost filled the gallery and attracted the attention of the Georgia lawmakers. Mr. Goodwin, of Fulton, at once introduced resolution inviting the Davy Crocketts and their escort to seats on the floor.

The resolution was unanimously adopted. and the party was at once brought in and given the seats of the members. The house at once adjourned, and the Twenty-first regiment band, that is with the party, was brought in, stationed by the speaker's stand, and struck up "Dixie." The house yelled. "Yankee Doodle" followed, and was likewise enthusiastically cheered. When the band ceased playing Speaker Howell made a short address of welcome. He said it would never do for the Georgia legislature to have these distinguished guests here without a word from them. He understood there were a number of orators among them, and the members of the house would be delighted to hear from the Davy Crocketts. "We are glad to let you know," said he, "that we know no north and no south here, We are glad to have you with us. In the name of the house of representatives of Georgia, I welcome you."

Mr. Derrick Brown, editor of The Evening Enterprise, of Poughkeepsie, responded in a brief but eloquent speech:

"In behalf of these visitors from a small and insignificant city of the Empire State North to est city of the Empire State of South, I have to say we are glad to be with you. Your geniality and hospitality have more than filled our expectations. You should take a great pride in your city. We have seen many evidences of your prosperity and thrift. If the entire state of Georgia is like this city you will continue to hold your position as the Empire State of the South." He declared that Georgia exceeded the great state of New York in many things. Georgia had more miles of railroad in proportion to population than New York, and the percentage of children in school in Georgia was greater than New York He closed by expressing his thanks for the cordial welcome given his party. Colonel John Milledge was introduced by Mr. Clifton, of Chatham, as an old confederate veteran. Colonel Milledge made a short, but sloquent, speech, which was well received. The party was then received by Governor Northen, and then some of them climbed to the dome of the capitol and enjoyed a panoramic view of the city. From the capitol the visitors were driven down Hunter to Loyd, up Loyd to Mitchell, up Mitchell to Whitehall and thence to the Kimball, where they took dinner. Inspecting the Fire Houses.

In the afternoon a party of four, consisting of M. L. Ferguson, John Way, Frank O. Abeel and F. J. Schuster, visited all the fire engine houses in the city and were shown through by Chief Joyner. They examined all the apparatus employed, and greatly admired the complete and thorough equipment of the Atlanta fire department. Reception Last Night.

The evening was very pleasantly spent, and the Davy Crocketts were royally entertained. During the evening Mr. W. C. Judge Robert L. Rodgers was introduced and made a most happy speech. He referred to the pleasant visit of the Poughkeepsie party, and said they had been "scattering sugar all along from New York to Georgia."

Mr. Derrick Brown also made a short talk, which was happily received.

A Word About the Guard.

In remembering their trip to Atlanta, the Davy Crocketts will ever remember the Gate City Guard, whose guests they were while here.

The Guard has handsomely entertained these visitors while here, and have kept up Atlanta's reputation for hospitality.
They deserve much praise for the courteous and hospitalie manner in which they have A REMINISCENCE OF DAVY CROCKETT, Suggested by the Visit of the Davy Crockett Hook and Ladder Company. Just at this time, while the Davy Crockett guests are in Atlanta, a personal reminiscence of the famous frontier statesman cannot fail to be of general interest.

Mr. Charles Johnson, known extensively as "Boggy, of Arkansas," and a cordial old gen-tleman of the old stamp, is now in Atlanta, and he has some pleasant recollections of Davy Crockett during the last period of his life. In an interview yesterday Mr. Johnson gave way to a chain of peveries in which faces of half a century ago came up before him, and events long since forgotten were re-enacted again in fancy.

In the midst of this spell Mr. Johnson said:
"I met Davy Crockett first at Jackson, Tenn., about the year 1836, when I was but a mere youngster. I then listened in wonder ment to a great political discussion between Crockett and Adam Huntsman, who were rival candidates for congress. It took place in the woods adjacent to Jackson, and was one of

"I well remember Crockett's manly presence. He had a large, sinewy body with square shoulders and erect bearing. "He seemed to carry the crowd with him.
You know he was a famous orator and was never excelled as a wit. Storm after storm of applause and intermittent volleys of unconrollable laughter interrupted him at frequent intervals. It was well known that Crockett's defeat chagrined him

Thus, by a slight circumstance, then regarded as a misfortune, did I escape being massacred at the hands of the fiendish Mexicans."

An Election Manager.—The general council is required by the city charter to elect managers of election at the last meeting in September. At the called meeting of that body held last week man gers of election in all the wards were elected. Judge E. C. Kontz was unanimously elected from the fifth ward. He declined to serve on the ground that he was out of politics and in-tended devoting his whole time to the practice of law. THE GRADY HOSPITAL GOING UP

Just as Fast as Men and Money Can Do the Work-The Committee Has a Hard Time of It.

Work on the Grady hospital is not lagging. The contractors are pushing the building rapidly, and the indications are that the hospital will be open by the first of the year.

Very few Atlantians know what the committee, to which the construction of the build ing was entrusted, has gone through, It has been up-hill work from the inception of the scheme. Money has been hard to secure, and upon more than one occasion it looked very inch like the building would have to be abandoned.

But the committee, though discouraged, never weakened, and now the members feel quite happy and satisfied.

This is because the last appeal to the city for aid has been granted.

Mr. Hirsch, Captain English, Mr. Inman Dr. Cooper, Dr. Calhoun and Mr. Elsas, of th committee, have been before the dispensers of the city money, and have succeeded in securing a promise of all the money needed. It was a hard case of beg with the committee. But when did ever Mr. Hirsch, Mr. Inman.

Captain English, Dr. Cooper, Dr. Calhoun and Mr. Elsas fail?

Mr. Hirsch opened the work with a paper in his hand. That paper was a complete history of the hospital up to date. It showed that $63,000 had already been collected and expended, and that $29,000 more was wanted. "If the city," said Mr. Hirsch, "will give us $20,000, we will try mighty hard to raise $9,000 on the outside. Mr. Hirsch's appeal for the $20,000 was strong and earnest.

Captain English followed Mr. Hirsch, and in his own inimitable style asked for the help.
"You know, gentlemen," he said, "just as well as I do, that we dislike very much to bother you, but where else can we go? We could have made the hospital smaller, but then it would not answer. We are just now where we can go no further, and we must have the money to go ahead. The people have not come up as we thought they would in a popular subscription plan. We would not have the hospital fail for anything, and neither would you. We have a peculiar pride in it; so have you, and so has all Atlanta.

A hospital was one of the pet schemes of Henry Grady before he died, and can we, remembering that, let it fail. The title to the property is in the city of Atlanta, and we have no right to borrow money on it. Tell us what to do and we will do it cheerfully. We'll do anything you ask. If you tell Hirsch, Inman, Cooper, Calhoun and Elsas to go ahead and that you will stand to us after this year, we'll get the money."

Dr. Hunter P. Cooper concurred in all that had been said by Messrs. Hirsch and English. He described the favorable location of the lot and the buildings, and said it was well adapted to the purposes for which they are intended. "This hospital is in keeping with the growth of our city," he said, "and it is one she will not outcrow in twenty wars. People are of our city," he said, "and it is one she will not outgrow in twenty years. People are dying in Atlanta almost every day on account of not having the proper medical attention at the proper time. Some are hurt on railroads, and need immediate attention, and for the want of it they die. The lot cost only $16,000, and today we could get $40,000 for it."

Those who heard the appeal were thoroughly aroused and every one wanted to help the committee. Mr. Hulsey started the work.

"We are all," said he, "ready and anxions to help the Grady hospital. But we have setrules and laws to go by, and must act in ac-rules and laws to go by, and must act in ac I know that all Dr. Cooper has said is true, and I don't think ar gument necessary to convince any of us of the need of the hospital."

Then turning to Mr. Blee, chairman of the finance committee, Mr. Hulsey went on:
"Mr. Rice, as chairman of the finance committee, you know where our money is, where it is needed and whether any can be spared.

Can we help them?"
"I do know," said Mr. Rice, "where every penny is, and I don't know just what we can do. No one is more anxious than I to help the project through, but just now we are mighty tight pushed. There's $5,000 to the Boulevard project through, but just now we are mighty tight pushed. There's $5,000 to the Boulevard school, and it is a matter of honor with us not to touch that. There is $5,000 to the streets. Mr. Lambert can best tell you whether the streets can be put off until next, year or not. Dr. Turner can tell you whether the bridge work can be put off or not.

"I would like to ask Mr. Woodward, then," said Mr. Hulsey, "If the $5,000 given to the Boulevard school can's be put off till next year?"

"We are now buying a lot," said Mr. Woodward, "and I can't see any way to put it off."

"I'm with the committee," said Mr. Hendrix, "in this work, and I intend doing all I can to help them through. It's just like Mr. Rice says—we are hard up and have no money to spare, but next year we'll be better off. Now, I think we can afford to let them go ahead and get the money, with the understanding that we'll give it to them next year. It always costs money, I know, to borrow money, and to pay the interest I move that we grant the committee $300."

That was done.

The committee, relying upon the promise, has succeeded in borrowing the money needed, and the work is going on rapidly.

The Marriage of Two Brilliant Young People Last Evening.

OTHER WEDDINGS IN ATLANTA.

Society Events Which Interest the People of Atlanta and Georgia—Points About People.

Last evening at 8 o'clock Mr. Thomas R. R. Cobb, of Athens, and Miss Maude Barker, of Atlanta, were united in the holy bonds of wedlock at the home of the bride on Peachtree. The solemn and beautiful ceremony of the Episcopal church was eloquently performed by Rev. Dr. Barnett, the bride and groom standing in the wide and lofty corridors against a background of white roses and misty green ferns.
Miss Barker entered on the arm of Mr. Cobb.

To describe her as a radiant and ideal vision of a fair young bride seems trite indeed beside the actual and enchanting beauty of this perfect girl. actual and enchanting beauty of this perfect girl.

Miss Barker has always possessed that sort of flower-like beauty which shines fairest when simply adorned, and on this, her wedding night, she wore no ornaments save a few sprays of waxen orange blossoms which caught her veil to the brown, silken meshes of her hair. The gown was an elegant lyory, white duclesse satin gown was an elegant ivory, white duchesse satin, the skirt front being cut in points with a chiffon ruffle showing beneath and chiffon ruffles finishing the V-cut neck and long sleeves. She carried in her hand a white satiu prayer book painted in

As this handsome pair stood up before the man of God to pronounce the few short lines which should make them eternally one, their beauty brought back the old romances of the knights and ladies of the olden time. They were preceded by Miss Alice Barker, the small maid of honor, and the trio of bridesmaids, Miss Effle Howell, Miss Cornelia Jackson and Miss Nellie Inman, the three last kneeling on a lovely white satin cushion painted in orange blossoms.

Little Miss Barker wore a charming Josephine gown of china silk reaching to her pretty feet, and having the short waist and full puffed sleeves trimmed with full frills of lace. The three bridesmaids were white crepe de chine gowns, trimmed with chiffon ruffles, and carried roses. Their only ornaments were golden hearts filled with forget-me-nots, the souvenir gifts of the bride.

Soon after the quiet ceremony, which was witnessed by only relatives and a few very intimate friends, many friends arrived to congratulate the happy pair and wish them every happiness. The handsome apartments presented a hawilder. The handsome apartments presented a bewilder-ing scene. The mantels were adorned with roses and maiden-hair fern, and many tropical plants waved their fan-like emerald leaves in bowwindows and alcoves.

Refreshments were served on tete-a-tete tables in the inclosed, vine-hung veranda. The wedding table in the dining room was beautifully arranged with fruits and flowers, the center piece being the large bride's cake, exquisitely iced with bunches of grapes and leaves. Another lovely cake was iced in silver and ornamented with roses. The buffets and china cupboards were covered with brilliant autumn blosoms, and, indeed, this much-beloved bride had such quantities of flowers sent her that the whole mansion wa glowing and fragrant from these offerings. The presents filled one entire apartment, being limit-less in number and simply superb in every way. The gift of the bridesmaids, Miss Inman, Miss Howell and Miss Jackson, was a magnificent table service of silver. One large table was entirely filled with splendid cut glass, another with china, another with sliver, while pictures, bric-a-brac, etc., bewildered one with their beauty. Among the guests present from a distance on the occasion were Judge Daniel Clarke, of Toledo, and Miss Susie Clarke; Mr. Will Cobb, of Athens; Mr. and Mrs. Howell Cobb, Jr., of Athens; Miss ache Lipscomb, of Athens, and Miss Elizabeth Alexander, of Augusta.

At 11 o'clock Mr. and Mrs. Cobb left for Athens

amid a shower of rice and "God-speed," as the carriage rolled away. Miss Barker is the oldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. C. P. N. Barker, of Atlanta, who, having wealth and a high social position, have been able to give their daughter every advantage. She has more than requited their love and their ambition, in her beauty of person and of character. The very pretty wedding which united Mr. Francis Wilkes, of Charlotte, N. C., and Miss Manie Beall, of New Orleans, occurred yesterday morning at 11 o'clock at St. Luke's cathedral,

The bride entered the cathedral on the arm of the groom to the wedding march impressively played by Mr. O'Donnelly. She made a lovely long-trained picture in a handsome gown of white armure silk trimmed with chiffon ruffles. The veil was confined with pearl pins, and a bandsome bouquet of bride roses completed the toilet. The Rev. Mr. Reese performed the beautiful Episcopal service, made more impres-sive by the nuptial mass. After the ceremony sive by the nuptial mass. After the ceremony an elegant reception was given Mr. and Mrs. Wilkes by Mrs. Nicolson, at her home on Forrest avenue, and they departed at noon for Chattanooga, where they will spend a few days on Lookout mountain, and then depart for their home in Charlotte. A large and enthusiastic meeting was held yes-day afternoon of the ladies interested in the opera, "The Pirates of Penzance," which Mr. Simpson proposes giving for the benefit of the Grady hospital. Colonel Milledge, one of the hospital trus-tees, introduced Mr. Simpson with a few cordial and complimentary remarks on his ability to carry through this grand musical entertainment, an the meeting closed with a list of the names of the ladies who would take active parts in the affair, which will undoubtedly be one of the grandest musical entertainments ever given in Atlanta. There will be a chorus of thirty-two male and thirty-five fine female voices and the principal parts will be taken by noted musicians. The mes, scenery, etc., will be handsome and

MARIETTA TODAY

The Funeral of the Beloved and Yenerable Rev. Dr. Benedict Will Occur.

SORROW IN GEORGIA OVER HIS DEATH.

He Was Prominent in the Church of the Diocese of Georgia in Former Years. His Children Here.

Rev. Dr. Samuel Benedict, the distin-guished Episcopal minister who lost his life n an elevator accident in Cincinnati Tuesday night, is well-known in Georgia. He was for many years a leading minister in this state, serving large congregations in Savannah and Marietta and other cities.

Three of his children now live in Georgia, one in this city and two in others. Dr. Benedict was a native of Connecticut and moved to Georgia several years before the war. He was a resident of Atlanta during the war, and was arrested here by the United States government, and with his family transported to Canada. Although a northern man by birth, Dr. Benedict was greatly in sympathy with the confederate cause. During the war he was at all times a faithful and devoted soldier of the cross in the camps of the confederacy, and it was for this that he was arrested by orders of General Grant, and, with his family, transported to Canada.

He labored at several places in the state before and after the war, but his chief labors were performed in Savannah and Marietta. Especially notable were his services at Savan nah during the yellow fever epidemic. He untiringly labored at his post, visiting the sick and burying the dead. He remained through it all, and, for a considerable time, was the only minister on the ground to do work-others being either sick or absent.

In 1878 he was called to the charge of St. Paul's Episcopal church, in Cincinnati, where he has remained up to the time of his tragic death. He distinguished himself as one of the eloquent and able divines in the state of Ohio, and his death will be a great loss to the parishioners of St. Paul's, in Cincinnati, and the diocese of southern Ohio. He had two assistants in the charge of St. Paul's, which is one of the largest parishes in the state. In consideration of the esteem in which he was held by his congregation, and the faithful and valuable service he had rendered, his church had just granted him an eight-months vacation, and had made up a purse sufficient to pay the expenses of himself and wife durthe time in Europe. Dr. and Mrs. Benedict had all their arrangements made for an Europe, and would have sailed about Novem-

The living members of Dr. Benedict's family are Dr. S. C. Benedict, a practicing physician of Athens, Ga.; Mr. John A. Benedict, cashier of the Merchants' bank, of Athens Mrs. Robert Zahner, of this city; Mrs. C. D. Williams, of Steubenville, O.; Rev. George E. Benedict, an Episcopal minister of Virginia; Rev. Ernest M. Benedict, assistant rector of the Church of the Advent, of Cincinnati; Rev. Cleveland Benedict, who has recently graduated and is stationed somewher in Ohio, and Miss Julia Benedict, the youngest daughter, who lived with her parents.

Miss Julia was to have been married on the 20th instant to Mr. Hepburn, now of Cincinnati but formerly of North Carolina. Mrs. Robert Zahner knew nothing of her father's tragic death until she read it in THE Constitution yesterday morning. Late Tuesday night Mr. Zahner received a telegram stating that Dr. Benedict had been seriously hurt in an elevator accidentally, but the worst was not known until he received his Constitution yesterday

Dr. S. C. Benedict and Mr. John Benedict arrived in the city yesterday en route to Cininnati: but here they learned that the funer train would leave before they could reach there, and decided to stop at Marietta and make arrangements for the funeral, which

Dr. Benedict was about sixty-nine years old, and his service in the cause of Christianity was a long and valuable one.

The News in Athens. ATHENS, Ga., October 7.-[Special.]-The news of the tragic death of Rev. Samuel Benedict in Cincinnati yesterday caused profound sorrow in Athens, where he was well known and beloved. His two sons, Dr. Samuel C. Bene-dict and Mr. John A. The Piedmont exposition this year will be the greatest event that has occurred in the history of Atlanta, and if there is any way judging, Atlanta will have the greatest crowds

It is fair to estimate that there will not be less than half a million people pass through the gates of the great exposition during the three weeks.

Senor Payen Telegraphs Again.

The following dispatch was received yesterday by President Wylie from Senor Payen, the leader of the great Mexican band:

"SIOUX CITY, Ia., October 7.—To James R. Wylie, President, Atlanta, Ga.: We will play Bolossy Kiralfy's King Solomon spectacle music on the evening of our arrival, provided we are given time for rehearsal, and if you have instrumentation for full band of seventy-one people and with the conditions stipulated, per our telegram. Address to the Public.

The Chamber of Commerce issued the fol lowing interesting address to the public. It is full of interesting facts and worthy of careful consideration:
To Boards of Trade, Chambers of Commer

and the Public—The directors of the Chamber of Commerce, at their meeting held this day, desire to call the attention of the public to the Piedmont exposition, which takes place in this city from October 19th to November 7th, which will be one of the greatest events that has ever occurred in the south. We call attention to the great good that has been derived in this section from previous expositions and stimulated by that fact the directors of the exposition company propose this year to surpass and the Public-The directors of the Chamber of exposition company propose this year to surpass all their previous efforts. The inauguration of the success of this section dates from the great exposition of '81, and today the city of Atlanta stands foremost in the prosperity of all the cities of the south, and ranks second to no city without water course in the United States. The wonderful rowth of the city of Atlanta has been the marye of this entire country. Without any boom she has steadily marched onward. One of the causes of our steady progress is the opportunity afforded manufacturers and inventors, and the kind treatent and courtesies extended to all who come. With its suburbs Atlanta now has 100,000 in-habitants, 10,000 of which has been added within

She has the finest streets in the south, thirtysix miles being paved with belgian block, and has six miles being paved with Deignan Dioca, and magelectric lights.

Has sixteen banks with ample capital.

Has now sixty miles of street railway, nearly the whole of which is operated with the latest improved electric machinery, and all under one management. The Atlanta Consolidated railroad has been an important factor in the last six months in the progress of Atlanta.

They have already spent one and a half million in construction, and will spend within the next six months an amount equal to that already expended.

Transacts a wholesale mercantile business of one hundred and twenty million and a retail business of fifty million annually.

The railroad facilities of Atlanta are unsurpassed. It is the great distributing point of the south. Eight great lines go from here to all important points in the United States. The Richmond and Danville system has removed the offices of its entire system to Atlanta, and the salaries paid to clerks alone amount to over thirty thousand per month.

The manufactories of Atlanta are legion. No point south offers more natural advantages to manufacturers. The annual value of the manufactured product is $43,000,000, and consists of cotton, furniture, machinery. fertilizers, lumber, trunks, glass, paint, and about every other conceivable commodity. triable commodity.

In calling the attention of the Chambers of Commerce, boards of trade and the public generally, we again extend a cordial invitation to attend this exposition, and at the same time visit the south's great center and most prosperous city. We bid you, in behalf of the Chamber of Commerce and the city of Atlanta, a hearty welcome.

JOHN TYLER COOPER Re-elected Clerk of the County Commis sioners. The regular meeting of the county commissioners took place yesterday morning, a full board being present. The meeting began at 10 o'clock and continued until nearly 3 o'clock.

10 o'clock and continued until nearly 3 o'clock. It was a business meeting, devoid of sensations, although there was plenty of lively talk indulged in, but most of this talk was done by ontsiders who were permitted to appear before the commissioners and present their claims or air their grievances.

Mr. John Tyler Cooper, who for years has served the board faithfully as clerk, was reelected for another term by a unanimous vote. There was no opposition, for it was a foregone conclusion that he would be retained. Mr. Cooper's re-election was a well deserved compliment.

No Courtroom for Judge Westmoreland.

At the last meeting of the board the question of providing a courtroom for Judge Thomas P. Westmoreland, of the newly organized criminal court, was fully discussed, but no definite action was taken. By special request Judge Richard H. Clark appeared before the board yesterday to express his views on the subject. He said he did not see the immediate necessity of providing an additional courtroom. He believed that if the various courts would work harmoniously Judge Westmoreland would be able to use the basement of the courthouse part of the time and the city courtroom when Judge Van Epps was not holding court. The views of Judge Clark impressed the commissioners and they resolved to pursue a waiting policy—to do nothing in the matter at present.

An Alderman Heard. No Courtroom for Judge Westmoreland.

An Alderman Heard.

A verbal statement concerning the working of the extension of Jones street or Woodward avenue was made by its namesake, Alderman Woodward. The matter was referred to the committee on public works.

Manchester and Atlanta.

Manchester and Atlanta.

The new suburban town is to be connected by street railway with Atlanta. The board decided to grant the right of way. It was provided, however, that only electric cars shall be run. The line will be from Atlanta to Manchester and Hapeville. It was stated that steps to build the road would be taken

Money Refunded. P. R. Johnson, through his attorney, Mr. Hamilton Douglass, petitioned the board to refund $250, which he had paid for a liquor license conditionally. The license had been paid for but never used. It being obviously a just demand the money was refunded to the petitioner.

The Convict Question. The Convict Question.

Mr. Hunnicut raised the question of hiring convicts from other counties by declaring that he was opposed to paying $8 a month for them. He stated that over six thousand dollars had, during the first two months, been paid out for such imported convicts. The matter was disposed of by the board's deciding that from November 1st until the 1st of next March, no more convicts from outside counties shall be hired.

The Chalurane Question.

The Chaingang Question. Dr. Nelms and Mr. Garrett took about how the chaingang should be managed; that is where it should be worked. The latter wanted it used in working out the Greensferry road, while the former said it ought to be kept on the Pryor street extension. A vote was taken as to where the force should work, and there was a tie, and a compromise was made satisfactory to all parties.

A Complaint Heard.

The property warers and residents of the

A Complaint Heard.

The property owners and residents of the Boulevard, through a committee, lodged a complaint with the board against the Consolidated Street Railway Company for the manner in which its employes are laying the tracks. The complaint alleged that both the double tracks are being laid on one side of the street, whereas it was the understanding that they were to be laid in the centre of the street. The complaint was referred to the committee on public works and an investigation will be made.

The various committees made their reports.

The various committees made their reports, and the usual routine business was dis charged.

IN THE CITY HALL.

Atlanta Must Have a Fire Headquarters-Atlanta must have a fire department head quarters, and must have it quick. The Broad street houses are not at all suited to the department today. For three or four years Chief Joyner has been laying his plans for a headquarter building, but because there is only one bridge over the railroad he could not materialize his scheme. He was afraid to get too far away from Broad street.

But as soon as the general council decided to build the Forsyth street bridge the chief found a way out of his trouble. That bridge gave him another way across the railroad tracks, and he began searching for a lot suitable for the buildings. At first he tried to secure the lot on Alabama street, between Broad and Forsyth, now used as a livery stable by Stewart & Bowden. But here he failed.

Then the chief went further down Alabams the Maddox and Rucker property, where he found a good lot. This he pointed out to Mr. Hutchison, chairman of the fire board, who at once began negotiating with Mr. Maddox. That gentleman wanted $25,000 for the lot, and at a meeting of the fire board the mat-was brought up. Chief Joyner's plans were laid before the body, and as the members began understanding the situation they began advocating the chief's idea. Members of the board then conferred with Mr. Maddox and succeeded in trading him No. 1 engine house on Broad street for the lot.

But the trade was made, of course, subject to a ratification by the council. The general council, when the subject was mentioned, declined to close the trade and referred the whole matter to the finance committee and fire department committee. Those two committees will meet today and then the trade will be consummated and declared finally off.

"Atlanta needs nothing I can think of now," said Chief Joyner yesterday, "more than a fire department headquarters. The two houses on Broad street are not at all what we want, and the companies would never have been put there had there been no bridge, the companies would never have been put there had there been no bridge.

"Now that the Forsyth street bridge is to be built there is another way to cross the railroad tracks and we must move."

More City Bonds.

Atlanta is to issue $140,000 of new bonds, bearing four and one-half per cent interest.

The bonds will fall due in 1922.

The new bonds are to be issued for the purpose of paying off a bonded debt which falls due next January. The ordinance authorizing these bonds reads:

Be it ordained by the mayor and general council, that the finance committee be instructed to have prepared $140,000 of coupon bonds, as follows: One hundred and forty bonds of $1,000 each, aggregating $140,000. Said bonds to be dated January, 1822, to be due in thirty years thereafter, and to be payable January 1, 1922, the coupons of said bonds to be payable semi-annually, on the ist day of July and January, for interest on the same, at 44, per cent per annum. Said bonds and coupons to be payable in gold coin, either in the city of New York or at the office of the city treasurer in the city of Atlanta, and to be free from city taxes; said bonds to be signed by the mayor and treasurer and countersigned by the mayor and treasurer and countersigned by the mayor and treasurer who shall faffix thereto the seal of the city; the coupons attached to these bonds shall have the name of the city treasurer lithographed thereon. Said bonds shall be sold under the direction of the unsyor and finance committee, and the proceeds thereof applied to the redemption of rection of the mayor and finance committee, and rection of the mayor and mannee committee, and the proceeds thereof applied to the redemption of eighty bonds of $500 each, known as bonds to fund the floating debt, dated October 1, 1879, and falling due January 1, 1892, bearing interest at 6 per cent per annum. And also 100 bonds of $1,000 each, dated August 1, 1872, and due January 1, 1892, bearing 8 per cent interest, and known as bonds issued to pay floating debt and bridges. These two issues of bonds amounting to $140,000.

When the judge of police court hereafter fails to put in an appearance one member of the general council can hold the court.

Herotofore it required three members of that body to take the judge's place.

This caused a great deal of trouble, and it was almost impossible quite frequently to find three members who could find the time, and legislation was asked for enabling the council to make the change. The legislation was secured and Mr. Broyles has an ordinance awaiting Mayor Hemphill's signature, authorizing and empowering one member of the body to hold the court.

It was rumored around the corridors of the capitol yesterday evening that Governor Northen and Colonel Livingston, president of the alliance, had made friends. These gentlemen have not been on speaking terms since the executive mansion caucus. Governor Northen would not talk on the subject, and Colonel Livingston said that friends of the governor had approached him on the subject, and that he had expressed his willingness to be friendly, but that there had been no written agreement between himself and the governor, as rumor had it.

ALABAMA STREET

Will Be Extended Across the Railroad Tracks and

STRAIGHT INTO WEST ATLANTA

The Legislature Grants the Privilege of Passing Through the State's Lands, and Now the City Can Open the Street.

Alabama street is to be opened. And the ten thousand citizens over in vest Atlanta will be brought a half mile earer the center of the city thereby. For years the necessity of the opening of this street has been realized by the citizens of Atlanta. But the state owned the property through which the street would have to be cut, and without authority of the state the city could do nothing.

Had it been private property the city could have cut through and opened a street, but it could not move a peg on the state's

To remedy this predicament in which the city council was placed, Mr. Goodwin introduced a bill in the legislature granting the city the right to cut a street through the state's property—the street to be sixty feet wide—for which the city is to pay the state $2,500.

The land in question is the triangular hole south of the Western and Atlantic freight depot, and bounded by the Western and At-lantic, the Central and the East Tennessee

Mr. Goodwin, before introducing his bill, secured in writing the consent of the present lessees of the Western and Atlantic. He then rushed the bill through the house and senate, and now it is in the hands of the governor for his signature.

Alabama street, as extended, will diagonally cross the ten tracks of the Central railroad on a bridge. Then the north side of the old triangular hole will be filled to a level with the surrounding lands. Across this the street will run. Then it will go through the embeneath the tracks, and then run into west Atlanta, placing the citizens of that section of the city in a position where they can come di-rectly to the center of the city without going a half mile out of the direct route to get across the network of railroad tracks.

As soon as the governor signs the bill, the route will perhaps be surveyed by the city and the matter of erecting the bridge and opening the street will be in the hands of council for action. While the work will cost much money, still it is of such vital importance to the city that council will perhaps act as early as possible and appropriate sufficient money to accomplish the work within the next year or two. Mr. Goodwin says there are good buildings on both sides of the Central tracks and that the bridge will not be expensive.

WEST ATLANTA IS SICK OF IT,

And the People Are Up in Arms-A Special Committee Investigating the Work.

Atlanta's dumping grounds may yet cause and the storm is liable to break at any minute.

The dumping grounds are located on the western side of Atlanta, and every wagon, cart or dray that carries garbage, dirt or waste t the place must make its way through the western portion of the city. Day after day for years and years the wagons have moved wostward along Marietta street in their pilgrimage to the city's country lands. At first the people along the route paid but little attention to the wagons, but as the city grew the wagons increased in number and the loads of disagreeable stuff grew in size.

With this growth the unpleasant odor and the swarms of flies multiplied until life along the pathway of these wagons became almost a burden. Then sickness and disease manifested themselves in sections where death had always held complete sway.

Patience has always been one of the chief characteristics of Atlanta people, but finally the stock in wholesale quantities, as it became exhausted, and those tormented and distressed by the evil trouble among themselves, and then prepared a petition, which they sent to the general

This summer the long string of carts has been more offensive than ever before, and more sickness has existed in that section of the city than Atlanta's history has ever shown. All this aroused the fifth ward people on the western reserve, and each week a big petition was prepared, asking the general council to remove the dumping grounds. The paper was turned over to Mr. Lambert, the senior councilman from the fifth, and Monday he produced it in regular meeting of the body.

The paper showed a most deplorable condition, and its reading caused quite a sensation. To many the facts presented were absolutely

Mr. Turner, the junior fifth ward member, quickly and ardently joined hands with his colleague, and strenuously demanded relief for his constituents.

But the garbage question in Atlanta is a big one—too big, by long odds, to be disposed of in a day-and the whole question, by a resolution of Mr. Hendrix, was referred to a special committee of five, composed of Mr. Hendrix, chairman; Mr. Turner, Mr. Lambert, Mr. Sawtell and Mr. Shropshire.

The chairman, as a member of the sewer committee, has given sanitary matters a care ful study. Mr. Lambert and Mr. Turner represent the ward and are in a position to know and ascertain the feelings and wishes of the people more directly interested than the rest of the city. Mr. Sawtell, like Mr. Hen-drix, is a good sanitarian, while Mr. Shrop-shire, as chairman of the sanitary committee, knows what remedy may be given.

Both Mr. Turner and Mr. Lambert are determined to relieve the people they represent.

"We must have relief for them," said Mr.

Turner yesterday.
"If the people knew how they have been imposed upon," said Mr. Lambert, "they would join in the request. From dark till daylight and from daylight till dark the people on the western reserve get an aroma peculiar only to and when the wind comes from the west, said Mr. Turner, "it is—well, I don't see how they can stand it."

"There are more flies in west Atlanta," remarked Mr. Lambert, "than in the rest of Atlanta. A fly is a funny thing you know, and we have now than our thorough." and we have more than our share of them."

What relief can the city give these western parties? The committee is now weighing that question and hunting for an answer. Every member is determined to do something to help the western reserve out. western reserve out.

But what?
"We are bound to do something," said Mr.
Hendrix, chairman of the committee, "but we can't say what yet." 'Why not move the grounds?" he was

'We may have to do that. But we want to find a place which will prevent another re-moval then. The committee would like to moval then. The committee would like to know of some plan by which the garbage can be destroyed and we would gladly give an audience to any one who can tell us about burning, burying or washing it away."

"How much land has the city out there?"

"About a hundred acres. When we bought it, and that wasn't many years ago, it was the poorest piece of land in Fulton county. Now it's one of the richest farms in Georgia. If we could find a poor piece, full of gullies, ditches and washouts about ten or fifteen miles from town, near a railroad, and get the road to run a track to it, we might do for awhile."

"The truth is," continued Mr. Hendrix, the question is about one of the gravest and ost important Atlanta has had to deal with most important Atlanta has had to dear within a long time, and we would like to hear from any one who can give us any suggestions."

Dr. Woolf faced this with a feeling of indignation. He brought forth his soldierly career, proved it conclusively and Monday a week ago he became a full-fledged Confederate Veteran. At the time the investigation was made the doctor remarked that a certain member was trying to keep him out of the association to protect himself; that the member in question was himself false in representing to be an hon-orable confederate soldier; that when the war broke out he had deserted his post and hid until all strife had ended. This member, he said, feared betrayal from the hands of himself, and resorted to this means to escape it. Dr. Woolf was admitted to membership and every one thought the matter had ended. Not so. A few days ago he sent to South Carolina for proof that the said member had not lought in the regiment claimed.

"I am awaiting a reply," said no, "and at the next meeting of the veterans, I shall make this man face his record. He will be exposed for both his career during the war and his recent act."

When asked why he had not dismissed the affair, since everything had become calm, the doctor replied: "It would be dishonest in me not to push the matter."

A lively time is certainly promised.

THE NEW YORK MARKET. The Day on the Floor of the New York Stock

Exchange. NEW YORK, October 7.—The stock market today showed a further contraction in the amount of busi-ness done, while the drooping tendency of prices con-inued under the persistent hammering of profesonals, and some of the leading shares were mate rially depressed as a result of the day's operations. The outside demand was smaller than for any day ince before the late rise began, and the realizing sales checked the rallying tendency usually developed by an early demand. London was a moderate seller in he forenoon, but bought later in the day, without having any material effect upon the course of the naving any material effect upon the course of the market. There were some supporting orders in the market on the part of some bull manipulators, but these were readily filled, and the traders who worked on the bear side with more animation gradually forced the market back until the net declines assumed material worselves. The attacks today were divected against Grangers, and all suffered. Eric continued to be largaly traded in and displayed rather more resisting power than the rest of the active shares, though giving way more rapidly in the late trading. The general market was drooping from the opening to the close, and the reactions were few and feeble. The opening prices were from ½ to ½ per cent lower than last night's figers, and prices began to settle immediately, with Bock Island, Missouri Pacific and the Villards leading at different times during the day. No special features of note marked the transactions, and the day was unusually barren of interest, no movement of special moment taking place at any time. The close was dull and heavy to weak at about the lowest figures. Sales of listed stocks, 285,000 shares; unlisted, giving way more rapidly in the late trading. The gen

Hubbard, Price & Co.'s Circular.

MEW YORK, October I.—[Special.]—Our cables from Liverpool report the Manchester spinners well under contract for yarns, without having secured the cotton necessary to fill their contracts, and the good demand in Liverpool for cotton is due to this fact. During our opening call, telegrams were received from Fort Smith reporting a killing frost last night, which were immediately reported to Liverpoot, and that market quickly responded by an advance of three to four points, closing irregular. When this information became known, our market quickly responded, advancing in the face of the liquidation of a large account of some 5,000 bales, and with only a slight reaction, closing steady at the best prices of the day. According to the weather map, the cold was central in western Arkansas, where a killing frost was reported and a further frost is predicted for tonight in Tennessee, Arkansas, northern Texas and northern Louisiana, and the trade has a vivid recollection of the damage resulting from a frost two years ago on the same date, and thoy wait with interest the confirmation of the and they wait with interest the confirmation telegrams received today. Judging from the te the cables received this afternoon, Liverpool is deeply interested, and should the cold wave extend tonight interested, and should the cold wave extent on the over the cotton belt with resulting reports of frost, the turning point in the temper of the trade may have come. Locally, the warm wave following the cold shop, causes the trade to regard the reports of damage as premature.

THE WHITFIELD BILL

the House Yesterday-More About Free Passes for Legislators and Judges-Other Matters.

The Whitfield insurance bill passed the house yesterday after a four-hours' debate. The bill provides against combinations or pools of insurance companies.

Mr. Fleming had a substitute providing for placing the insurance companies under the control of a commission, but that was voted down. In the afternoon there was some debate over the free pass bill. It will perhaps be dopted by the house this week, but the chances are against its becoming a law. The Proceedings in Detail. The special order for the day was the Whitfield insurance bill.

Mr. Whitfield opened the discussion. He advanced practically the same arguments as when the bill first came up, attacking vigorously the Southeastern Tariff Association

In support of his substitute, Mr. Fleming, of Richmond, argued that it would be better to place the insurance combination under a nission than to destroy it and open the doors to wildcat companies.

Mr Calvin, of Richmond, also spoke for the Fleming substitute, and Mr. Cattes, of Muscogee, while he was opposed to any legislation thought if a bill must pass that it should be the Fieming substitute.

Colonel Seay, of Rome, wanted the Whit-field bill adopted, and he spoke earnestly and aloquently for it. In the course of his arraignment of the Southeastern Tariff Association, Colonel Seay charged that since the opening of the question during the early part of the session the members had been besieged by lobbyists working in the interest of the insurance monopoly. He declared these lobby-ists had intruded on the floor of the house and hardly a single member had escaped their nholing in the lobbies of the capitol and e Kimball house

Mr. Fleming replied very sharply to Colonel Seay's charge by asking him if two of his friends from Rome had not been here working the interest of his side of the question. Jolonel Seay replied that they had, but they had worked open and above board and had not resorted to the buttonhole process.

Colonel Huff, of Bibb, argued in favor of the substitute. He declared the whole opposition to the Southeastern Tariff Association, started and ended in Rome, growing out of a slight disagreement there. He declared the Whitfield bill would drive out the home companies, and the state would be overrun with wildcat companies.

Mr. Fieming then argued at length in favor of his substitute, and Mr. Whitfield closed the debate in an argument for the bill. The Fleming substitute was voted down by

Then the vote on the original bill was taken, and it was passed by 106 to 36.

The bill as passed by the house provides for the prevention of combinations or pools of insurance companies or their agents tending to defeat or lessen competition in the business of insurance in the state of Georgia.

It provides that when the insurance comner shall have knowledge of any pool or combination he shall revoke the license issued to such company and the same shall not be ressued until such agreements have been an-

The Free Pass Bill. At the afternoon session of the house the free pass bill fell like an unexpected rocket among the members, and created considerable excitement and discussion.

Mr. Reid, of Putnam, asked unanimous consent to take up for a second reading bill No. 1,071. Every one thought it to be a local bill, and no objection was made, but when the clerk started reading there was consternation and objections everywhere.

It was, however, too late, and the bill was read a second time.

The reading gave some of the advocates of such a law an opportunity to air their views. Mr. Atkinson, of Coweta, thought it was wrong for judges to be trammeled in their decisions by reason of holding free passes. He also believed it would relieve members of the legislature of an embarrassment.

Mr. Fleming, of Richmond, expressed simi-The bill is now ready for passage. It can be taken up today or any day during the re-mainder of the session and passed. The bill will pass. It will pass within a day or two, but the chances are against it ever becoming a law.

It will perhaps die in a senate committee. Sears's Bill Defeated.

The Sears bill was voted down in the house yesterday afternoon. It was a bill to repeal that part of the funding law relative to the $50,000 of bonds donated to the State university by Senator The bill provided that when the bonds became due they be taken up instead of being removed in perpetuity as provided in a pre-vious act of the legislature.

It will be remembered that Senetar Brown donated these bonds for the education of poor boys in the university, and Mr. Sears's bill was for the purpose of annulling the agreement effected when the donation was accepted.

Mr. Sears spoke for the bill, and Mr. Fleming, of Richmond, against it. It was voted down by an almost unanimous voice of the

CAPITOL GOSSIP.

There is a good deal of gossip as to what the joint committee from the senate and the house, raised to investigate the leases of the Georgia, Central, Southwestern, and Augusta Savannah railroads, will do. It is said that they have agreed to a report, and just why they are holding it back is not very well Senator Callaway, it is understood, is now writing the report of the committee on the lease of the Georgia road. Mr. Berner will write the report of the committee on the lease of the Central railroad by the Georgia Pacific. Gentlemen who are posted about what the committee will do, state that they will report the Georgia road lease as legal, the Southwestern lease as legal, the Augusta and Savannah lease as legal, but the lease of the Central by the Georgia Pacific as illegal; that they will make certain recom-mendations in regard to this matter, and that the report will not be submitted to the legislature until proper machinery is arranged to authorize litigation to carry out their report on this matter. The committee, however, is silent about its filling their columns with a good deal of stuff on the line that an earnest effort will be made by the railroads to filibuster the session out and thus prevent any action on railroad legis

It has been made to appear that the railroads have agreed on this policy, and that every possible effort would be made to prevent action of any sort.

The absurdity of these rumors is shown by the action of the railroad committee of the senate yesterday afternoon. The railroads did not even ask to be heard before the committee being willing to let the argument rest with what has been made.

Senator Cabaniss, who is opposed to the railroad bill, which passed the house, offered a resolution in the senate instructing the committee to report at once, and only withdrew the resolution on the assurance of Chairman Johnson that the bill would be reported Thursday morning.

The committee considered the matter yes terday afternoon, and agreed on a substitute, which, while somewhat modifying the house's bill, contains the most objectio of that bill-the litigation clause. This will make a strenuous fight in the senate inevitable. Both sides have agreed that the senate shall vote on the matter on Friday at 12 o'clock. So the filibuster bugaboo was nothing more than a scare after all.

The Senate Substitute. The substitute as agreed upon by the committee, is as follows:

Section 1. Be it enacted, etc., That the railroad commission of this state shall have the power, when the public interest in their discretion requires it, to inquire into and examine all sales, leases, contracts and agreements heretofore or hereafter made by which the operation of rail-roads in this state are controlled, and to this end, and on notice to the railroad companies existing in this state, and to all non-resident persons, natural or artificial, operating railroads in this state, there shall be filed by said railroad companies or non-resident persons, with the commissi copies of any and all such sales, leases, contracts or agreements, and this is to include contract between other corporations or individuals by which the operation of railroads in this state are controlled. In their investigation the said commission shall have the aid and assistance of the attorney general, and the railroad companies and interested persons shall be entitled to a hearing. At said hearing the commisinterested persons shall be entitled to a hearing. At said hearing the commission shall inquire into the effect of said sales, leases, contracts and agreements upon the freight and passenger rates of both state and interstate, and shall consider what competition they are intended to destroy or promote, and whether they create or tend to create more competition, than they lessen. Such sales, leases, contracts and agreements as are found to be beyond the chartered powers of the corporations making them, and which defeat or lessen competition, or are intended to do so, or in any wise prevent reasonable and good service, are hereby declared illegal; and the commission shall make such rules and issue such orders in regard to rates and reasonable and good service as will prevent excessive rates and unjust discrimination, and preserve fair, just and reasonable rates and reasonable rates and reasonable and good service, or restore just, fair and reasonable and good service, as mentioned in this act, regard shall be had to the situation, condition, connections, length and surrounding circumstances of any railroad.

Sec. 2. That whenever in the judgment of said commission the public interest and the preservation of the benefit of railroad competition shall require the same, said commission is hereby authorized and empowered to fix such local freight and passenger rates as will counteract the effect of excessive rates on through freight.

Sec. 3. That if the rate charged by virtue of any such sale, lease, contract, or agreement, is in violation of this act, and said railroads fail to obey the rules and orders of the commission within sixty days after the same are promulgated, said railroad or anilroad company shall in each lation of this act, and said railroads fail to obey the rules and orders of the commission within sixty days after the same are promulgated, said railroad or railroad company shall in each case of such violation of this act incur a penalty of not more than $5,000 nor less than $1,000, to be fixed by the presiding judge, and the same shall be collected in the same manner now prescribed for collecting penalties for violation of the orders of the commission. Said sum so collected shall be covered into the treasury of the state. If the remedies hereinbefore provided shall prove insufficient to accomplish the purposes of this bill and to preserve just and reasonable rates and reasonable and good service as a foresaid, then and in that event the commission, if it deems it to the best interest of the state, may, with the advice and consent of the attorney general and with the approval of the governor, institute proceedings to set aside any such sale, lease, contract or agreement. In said suit the attorney general shall represent the commission, in whose name the suit shall be brought, under the provisions of this act.

Sec. 4. That nothing in this act shall be held as ratifying, invalidating or construing any existing contract, lease or sale.

Sec. 5. That all railroads, before increasing their stock or issuing bonds on any railroad in this state, shall submit the same to the commission for approval, which approval may, upon application of any interested party, be certified under their seal, which seal is to be provided by them for that purpose.

SHE SANG IN THE STORM.

A Young Cleveland Woman's Heroism On a Wrecked Ship.

From The New York Tribune. The steamship Philadelphia, of the Red D line, brought into port yesterday twenty-nine men from the wrecked steamship Californian, and they told a story of peril and adventure. When the Philadelphia left this port on her outward trip to the Dutch island of Curacos and Venezuelan ports, she took out seven pas sengers whom she transferred at Curacoa to the British, steamship Californian, which was bound from there to Savanilla, in the United States of Colombia. The Philadelphia went on her way to Venezuela, and at 4 o'clock that same afternoon, September 10, the Californian sailed for Savanilla.

Among the passengers transferred to the Cal-ifornian was a Mrs. Escobar, a young woman from Cleveland, twenty-two years old, who had recently marred a wealthy Colombian, and had recently marred a wealthy Colombian, and was on her way to her new home in her husband's country.

At 11 o'clock of the same night on which the Californian sailed, while it was pitch dark and blowing a gale, the steamer struck on a reef off the island of Auraba, and remained fast. A great hole was stove in her bows, and she filled rapidly with water. A steam pipe in the engine room was broken at the same time, and a great volume of steam rushed out. Charles Davis, the second engineer, was asleep in his bunk when the ship struck. He jumped out and rushed into the engine room, but the steam blinded him, and he was drowned by the in-blinded him and he was drowned by the in-blinded him, and he was drowned by the in-blinded him and he was drowned by the i and rushed into the engine room, out the steam blinded him, and he was drowned by the in-rushing water. Chief Engineer John Meit and an oiler, John Stevens, were in the engine room when the vessel struck. The oiler made a rush for the ladder leading to the deck. The a rush for the ladder leading to the deck. The escaping steam enveloped him, and when he reached the top the skin was burned from his face and arms in a frightful manner. The chief engineer climbed the ladder as the water rose, keeping his body submerged and every now and then ducking his head under to prevent being scalded by the steam. He reached the deck punintured.

vent being scalded by the steam. He reached the deck uninjured.

The vessel was now listed to port, and the waves were dashing over her in places. All of the passengers were called aft and provided with life preservers. It was too rough to admit of lowering a boat, and all night long they huddled together there, expecting every minute that the ship would go to pieces.

When all was terror, Mrs. Escobar proved herself a heroine. She refused to put on a life preserver, comforted and cheered the women, and by her example infused new courage into

She is possessed of a remarkably strong, sweet voice, and for hours, under the lee of the deckhouse, she sang songs of faith and courage, which sounded above the besting of the storm. At noon of next day the wind and sea had so far moderated that it was possible to lower the boats, and the wreck was possible to lower the boats, and the wreck was

THOSE "HONEST MEN"

Who Were Banded Together to Burn Neighbors' Houses.

THE TRIAL OF THE BAND IS ON.

The Story Told by the Two Members Who Turned State's Evidence-The Trial Continues Today.

Testimony in the Honest Man's Friend and Protector case began yesterday morning. It was a peculiar proceeding-two members of the band turning evidence against their former associates, and giving a complete exose of the entire organization. This is what

George Coffee and Patton Willis did. They were placed on the stand, as the first witnesses, and for fully two hours there was a tale unfolded such as would have done credit to the famous white caps in their palmiest

They stated how the society came to be formed, its aims and its doings. Coffee explained that it was organized to intimidate informers and revenue officers, to prevent interference with moonshining.

"In the middle of 1889," said he, "we had a first meeting up on Sharp Top mountain. The members were sworn in by Jim Wigginton, then a justice of the peace. There was an oath written out, and everybody who joined held up his hand and pledged himself to fol-low out the aims of the society. The boys assumed the names of people living in other portions of the state.

"Wheeler was John Hayes; Mont Halbert went by the name of Mike Stoner: Howland was known as Caldwell Pace; Padgett was Griffin Cason; Field was Mirian Blackwell. I don't remember the names of Bichards and "We had another meeting at a place near Jasper they call 'Sea Field.' That was on a Sunday in November. We talked about John Aiken and agreed that we were going to whip

"Was that to prevent his testifying against Harrison B. Jones?" was asked him.
"Well, no, sir," responded Coffee to the district attorney. "We just wanted to get him out of the country."

He then told how they came to burn down the house; how they came on the Tuesday night following with the intention of giving Aiken the whipping agreed upon, but failed to find any one at home. They then set fire to the house, burned it to the ground and went

He gave other information of the plans concocted by the band and wound up by drawing over himself the black overshirt, something like a blouse. It reached to his knees and at the neck was tied together. When he covered his head with a loose cloth cap, with openings over the eyes and nose, the costume was complete.

A more horrible, death-like, terrifying masquerade could hardly be imagined. It completely concealed the man's identity and made him a frightful looking object-the two aims of its use. A band of fellows clad in such as that, parading around to terrorize and maltreat government employes, certainly formed an ugly set.

These were organized into a military company. Jack Landsdowne was captain; Dave Wheeler, first lieutenant; George W. Field, second lieutenant, and Joe Richards, secre-

Patton Willis stated practically the same thing. During his testimony a recess of fif-teen minutes was had, and at 1:30 o'clock the case continued. Willis concluded, and then Newton McLean and Greenburg Parker were put on the stand for a few moments each.

John R. Aikens next testified: "I was in Atlanta," he stated, "attending to some business on November 12, 1889. My wife and children were staying with my mother, while I was away. On my return the house and conderable furniture, with my book, papers, and in fact everything but some hay and a cow and a calf were burned up." Further testimony from him was deferred.

Rowe Worley followed briefly, and then William McGaah concluded the day's testimony. "George Fields and Jim Wigginton wanted me to join their band. I was invited to do so at two or three of their meetings. I went to the gathering at Sea Field, but concluded I wouldn't join, because of the grounds. Fields was talking of getting up a society to stop reporting. Something, too, was said about revenue officers. Dave Wheeler, Wigginton, Halbert, Richards, Cicero Padgett and six or eight others were there. Seab Lansdowne said he was sorry they were meeting so much and doing nothing, and that he ed to go for Aikens. I left them and wouldn't join, because they wanted to whip folks for informing."

It was now late in the afternoon, and court adjourned. At 10 o'clock this morning the case will again be called. About twenty witnesses yet remain to be examined, among them being Representative Cayle, of Pickens

All Plead Guilty.
In the district court yesterday four moonshining cases were disposed of.

William J. Burns, of Union county, plead guilty to retailing, and was given a fine of $700 and a month's imprisonment.

W. E. V. Cathey and R. S. Ledford, of Rabun county, were each sentenced to two months for working in an illicit distillery. They entered a plea of guilty.

John Carter, of Union county, was given four months for the same offense.

The Information About Captain Hollis and the Atlanta Zouaves.

THE CONSTITUTION'S Zonave story, published yesterday morning, appears to have caused quite a sensation in certain quarters.

Certain members of the company are represented as denying the truth of statements made, and repudiating the story from begin-

THE CONSTITUTION secured its information from members of the company who not only stand well in the company, but stand well in Atlanta. They told of the existence of the committee and gave the names of some of the gentlemen composing that committee. They told, too, of the charges said to be in exist-

THE CONSTITUTION'S informants did not say that this committee was appointed by the company; neither did THE CONSTITUTION quote them that way. THE CONSTITUTION did say, however, that the committee was appointed at a meeting of members of the com-

Before the article was written a reporter was sent to No. 247 East Fair street. The directory gives that as Captain Hollis's residence. The party who responded to the door bell stated that Captain Hollis did not live there; that he had moved.

Every possible effort was then made to find Captain Hollis's residence, but without success.

One member of the company who is said to be a member of that committee, was pulled from his bed and asked about the story, but he declined positively to make any state-THE CONSTITUTION did not print one-half of the statement current about the matter.

The Two Names Will Not Be Associated After January 1st.

TWO BIG FIRMS DISSOLVE THEN.

Moore, Marsh & Co., and Draper, Moore & Oo., Expire by Limitation-New Firms to Succeed the Old.

The news of several important changes to take place in the near future created a sensation in business circles yesterday

These changes are based upon the announcement of the dissolution on January 1st of two of Atlanta's oldest and strongest business houses, and the application for a charter for a new firm which is the out growth of one of the old ones.

The firms to be dissolved are: Moore, MARSH & Co., and DRAPER, MOORE &

The new corporation to be formed is to be known as THE W. A. MOORE COM-PANY.

The Dissolutions. In the articles of copartnership of Moore, Marsh & Co., and Draper, Moore & Co., it was stipulated, it seems, that upon the death of either of the senior partners the partnership should expire by limitation on the 1st day of January following such death. It is under this provision that the partnerships so long existing will cease at the beginning of the new year, the estate of the late W. A. Moore withdrawing from both firms in which Mr. Moore was, in life, so important a factor. The W. A. Moore Company. The young men to whom befall the responsibilities of maintaining in the commercial world the high standard maintained by Mr. Moore have determined that the dissolution of the old firm shall not mean a withdrawal of the Moore name from the business world, and to that end The W. A. Moore Company has been formed.

Articles of incorporation have been applied for by Mr. Seaborn Wright as attorney, the incorporators being Messrs. Wilmer L. Moore, John M. Moore, J. F. Meador and A. J. Haltiwanger.

The object of the new corporation, as stated in the petition, is "to do a wholesale business in dry goods, notions, furnishing goods, boots, thoes, hats, and also such articles usually sold under these heads, together with the manufacture of any such articles as may be desired."

The capital stock will be $200,000, divided in shares of $1,000 each; and it is provided that the liability of each stockholder shall exceed by 50 per cent the amount of stock subscribed by him or her; and the new company will have the right to increase the capital stock to $750,000. The company will be organized with the following officers: President. Wilmer L. Moore. Vice president, John M. Moore,

Secretary and treasurer, A. J. Haltiwan-The place of business will be in the building new occapied by Draper, Moore

While the charter will give the new company the right to deal in furnishing goods, boots, shoes, hats, etc., it will at the outset confine its operations to dry goods and notions Mr. Wilmer Moore will be at the head of the dry goods department. Mr. J. Frank Meador, who has been so long with Moore, Marsh & Co., and who will be one of the stockholders in the new company, will be at the head of the

The estate of the late W. A. Moore will be at the back of the new company. At the Old Stand.

Mr. E. W. Marsh will remain in business at the "old stand," and it is thought that the firm of which he will be the head will be known as Marsh, Ashford & Company.

This is not settled as yet, however. At least if it is, the fact is kept from the public.

If true, it means that the new firm of which Mr. Marsh will be the head, will consist of himself, Mr. W. H. Ashford, Mr. Marsh's sons and the other gentlemen who hold junior partnerships in the present

Mr. Marsh was asked last night about his plans for the future. "You may say I will remain in business as my old stand," he said, and that was all. It is thought that the details of the ne firm have not been settled. Mr. Draper, Too. "And you may say for me," said Captain W. W. Draper last night, "that I will remain in the wholesale boot and shoe business."

Mr. Hugh McKee. It is stated in this connection that Mr. Hugh McKee, who is cashier of the firm of Moore, Marsh & Co., and is a son-in-law of the late W. A. Moore, will, after the dissolution of the present firm, return to the banking business, About the first of the year, Mr. McKee will open a new bank, or rather will be one of the principal factors in its establishment.

COOKING AND HEATING STOVES.

In selecting our Stoves we were careful to get something that will be satisfactory as to Baking Qualities, as well as beauty. One of the most practical features of our Stoves is the Rolling Damper, and several other conveniences that most all first-class Cooking Stoves lack. We have Stoves of every kind, Wood, Coal and Oil, and as to the Royal Blue Ware, Emperor William of Germany and all the Crowned Heads of Europe have used it for years.

1st. Because it gives the kitchen a neat, clean appearance.

2d. It is the most durable ware you can get.

3d. It is the lightest and easiest handled, and that is what you want.

For sometimes your cook comes up missing, then if you have this beautiful blue ware, it is a pleasure to prepare a meal. We would especially recommend it for surgeons to use in their laboratories; acids have no effect on it whatever. Several of our most prominent surgeons have their laboratories supplied with it, and will use nothing else, because it is the cheapest, cleanest and most durable ware ever offered to the public.

We invite the ladies of Atlanta and vicinity to call and inspect our

ATLANTA, Ga., October 7.—Editor Constitution:
There appeared a day or two ago in The Macon Telegraph what purported to be an interview with me. I did not know the young man as a reporter of The Telegraph, and was not apprised that I was being interviewed.

I did say that the farmers would leave nothing undone to secure the Ocala platform, and, judging the future in Georgia by last year, we would succeed in 1892, if votes would doit. When asked about Colone I Livingston's speech. I replied he Livingston's speech, I replied he represented the fifth congressional district and the alliance. I did not intimate that Colonel Liv-lngston had lost with the alliance. To the contrary, I know that he grows stronger and stronger every day, and that every allianceman in this state has unbounded con idence in him as a leader, and will stand shoulder to shoulder with him while he is leading us to victory; and as neighbors and al-liancemen, we are in perfect accord. Colonel Peek said vesterday that the relations between himself and Colonel Livingston were always of the pleasantest nature, and he had never had any cause to believe that Colonial Colonia nel Livingston was "losing caste" with the alliance. He did tell the correspondent of The Telegraph that the alliance was going to contend for Ocala demands, and what he had said had been contorted by The Telegraph man and made to appear that there was a breach between him-self and Colonel Livingston.

The matter will not likely drop where it is.

HARVEST STOVES.

The King Hardware Co., Agent for This Reliable Cooking Apparatus.

A few days ago the King Hardware Company, at the corner of Peachtree and Wheat streets, announced that they would sell cutlery of every character at reduced rates. They did this, as was stated at that time, for the purpose of advertising their house, and are more than satisfied with the result.

This week they offer to the public a new line—stoves—something they have never re-tailed before, but have sold in large quantities at wholesale. Now ithey are going to sell heating and cooking stoves at a great reduction for the purpose of introducing them.

They will offer them for the next ten days at practical cost. Those who desire to buy cooking or heating apparatus will do well to consult the King Hardware Company. This celebrated stove was exhibited at the Piedmont exposition last year and carried off the blue ribbon, and it is reasonable to suppose that if an exhibit is made this year they will be equally successful.

In speaking to Mr. George King, general manager of the King Hardware Company, yesterday, he said:

yesterday, he said:

"It don't require a great deal of advertising to sell the Harvest stoves, for the simple reason they stand on their own excellency. Merit will tell every time, and after the stove has been introduced it will be talked about enough to create a heavy demand for them. It is true it is a new condidate, for public force yes its it is a new candidate for public favor, yet its merit will push it rapidly to the front. There are many high-priced stoves sold throughout the country, and it is done by advertising alone, but I desire to say that if the Harvest stoves, both for cooking and heating purposes, cannot take the lead on account of their real cannot take the lead on account of their real worth, they will have to go to the background. I am satisfied, after having constantly used them and sold them, that they are the equal, if not the superior, of any stove manufactured in this country. I would not handle an article that I could not conscientiously recommend.

"In speaking of good goods and saleable articles, I would like to call the public's attention to our Royal Blue Ware. I think our house is the only importer of this beautiful line of goods in the south. Several months ago we sent a large order to Germany, and the goods have just been received. They are superior in every particular to crockery and tinware. Crockery will break andtinware will rust, but the Royal Blue Ware will neither break nor rust. While this line of goods has been on the market only a short time, it has been on the market only a short time, it has become quite popular with the ladies of At-lanta. We will have this week displayed in our large show windows a beautiful line of these goods, and respectfully ask the public to call at our store and examine them.

"We have also in store a large assortment of coal vases, fire sets, and for that matter, house furnishing goods of every description. We are determined to furnish the people of Atlanta the very best goods at the lowest possible prices, and whether they want stoves, hardware or house furnishing goods, they will find them at our store, corner Peachtree and Wheat streets."

FINE WRAPS.

The Latest in Style May Be Found at Rich Bros .- A Pointer for the Ladies.

The ladies of Atlanta just now would like to know at what place they can buy at a bargain wraps and furs. This is the season of the year that these goods are in demand. Yester-day was dark and gloomy, and but few ladies appeared on the streets without their wraps. Those who did appear were making their purchases. Messrs. M. Rich & Bros. desire to state that the tave a full and choice line of the est wraps ever shown in Atlanta. A good fur wrap, although they may occasionally cost a little more than a plain wrap, pays in the long run, in that they frequently save large doctor's bills, and render the health of the individual more perfect.

M. Rich & Bros. have just the kind of wraps ladies naturally want, and have them at very low prices. The record this old and reliable mercantile firm has made in furnishing firstclass goods to the people of Atlanta and of Georgia, is one to be envied. They have thousands of patrons throughout the state who appreciate them for their reliability and fair

A SPURIOUS CIRCULAR,

Which is Being Addressed to Allian-men by Ex-Postmaster Davidson.

HALEYSVILLE, Ala., October 7.—[Special.]—William H. Davidsen, formerly a member of the Farmers' Alliance, of Winston county, was recently accused of embezzling the funds of the postoffice at Haleysville, Ala., for which crime he is now under a bond of $1,000. It appears that Davidson has sent out a circular letter, calling upon brother alliancemen for appears that Davidson has sent out a circular letter, calling upon brother alliancemen for aid. This letter would be all right, if it did not bear the signature of President B. S. Conley, of the Winston alliance, as well as the official seal of that order. It is charged that he procured the use of the seal in a surreptitious manner, and without authority, and thus endeavored to cover one crime by committing another.

The circular states that Davidson is the vice tim of a plot, which was foully and criminally concected to ruin him and the alliance in that concoted to ruin him and the alliance in that section, and to put a check on all reform movements in Alabama. Alliancemen are, therefore, urged to stand by Davidson and "help him to down the rascals." He must raise $563, and alliances are called upon to contribute sums ranging from five to ten dollars to swell the fund. The circular closes as follows: "For the sake of humanity, and for his wife and child's sake help him! When

The Winston alliance, now in session, de-nounce the circular letter as a piece of under-ground, work, which were a piece of underground work, which was sent out without the consent of the alliance or any officer of the order. The alliance further states that James Gladding Clegg, whose name appears on this circular, is not now, and never was, a member of the order. The alliance further requests all who may have responded to the spurious circular, to address the secretary of the alliance, George W.
